The Beverly Hills City Council rejected a proposal to establish an overlay zone that would have allowed development on three T-1 parcels at the City gateway at Wilshire and Santa Monica Boulevard.

Councilmember Willie Brien was the lone supporter of the proposal. “I was very disappointed. I thought that we would have a much more positive response because there has been so much work on it and some of the people on the council had some real input into the process,” said Maynard Brittan, owner of parcel one. “To be very frank there was a lot of opposition from the Southwest.

The Wallis holds dedication and ribbon-cutting ceremony

The Wallis Annenberg Center for the Performing Arts, known as The Wallis, opened its doors on Oct. 15 following a dedication ceremony.

The center includes the historic 1933-constructed Beverly Hills Post Office, the 500-seat Goldsmith Theater, and the 150-seat Lovelace Theater. The new center will also include a theater school, café, gift shop and sculpture garden.

Wallis Annenberg and The Annenberg Foundation gave an initial grant of $15 million to fund the center. Bram Goldsmith, founding chairman of the Wallis Board of Directors, for whom the Goldsmith Theater is named, donated $5 million to the project.

Immediately after the ceremony, attendees were invited to enter the Grand Hall, located in the former Beverly Hills Post Office, now known as the Paula Kent Meehan Historic Building. Meehan contributed $5 million to the post office’s restoration.

The Wallis’ Board of Directors includes Chairman Jerry Magnin, Vice Chairman of Planning Richard Rosenzweig, Vice Chairman of Development Vicki Reynolds, Vice Chairman of Operations Arnold Rosenstein, Secretary Ronald D. Rosen, Assistant Secretary Susan Strauss, Treasurer Les Bider, Assistant Treasurer Jonathan Victor, Wallis Annenberg, John Bendheim, Eunice David, Sharon Davis, Hamid Gabbay, Donna Ellman Garber, MeraLee Goldman, Bram Goldsmith, Bruce Goldsmith, Fred Hayman, Ali Kassikci, Laurie Konheim, Lauren Leichtman, Kris Levine, Richard Lichtenstein, Linda May, Fred Nicholas, Paul Selwyn, Ariela Shani, Michael Smith, and Luanne Wells. The long-awaited performing arts center will hold its Inaugural Gala tonight with a second Gala to be held on Friday. The galas will be held in a large tent on Crescent Drive in between North and South Santa Monica Boulevard. Attendance to the Galas will be by invitation only.

Martha Graham Dance Company will open The Wallis’ inaugural season, Nov. 8 to Nov. 9.

Homeowner’s Association, which was very well organized, and they are obviously a political force and they had some very convincing arguments about the extent of development that’s going on and all the action in that neighborhood specifically and especially the traffic.”

Under the proposed overlay zone, property owners developing T-1 parcels alone would have been allowed to build one-story structures up to 18 feet tall with a 0.5 FAR, or 500 square feet of building for every 1,000 square feet of developable land. If property owners jointly developed T-1 and C-3 properties, the T-1 property adjacent to the C-3 property could be built up to three stories at a maximum of 45 feet with a 1.5 FAR.

City Planner Jonathan Lait, who gave a presentation to the city council prior to the public hearing, said that the final environmental impact report showed one unmitigable traffic impact at South Santa Monica Boulevard and Wilshire Boulevard.

The final environmental impact report considered the worst case scenario of development in the area, which assumes all sites are redeveloped at the same time at a maximum height and density. Lait said the scenario was unlikely to be realized.

Brittan and Jeff Wilson, owner of parcel two, both attended Tuesday’s meeting, and both individually encouraged the city council to adopt the proposed gateway zone. Brittan said that the Planning Commission had approved the proposal unanimously. Brittan reminded the council in his comments that the approval would not authorize a development and that the city would maintain oversight on future projects.

“Nothing can happen to our property unless we have guidelines,” said Wilson. State law did not require staff to include the 40-story development at 10000 Santa Monica Boulevard, just outside Beverly Hills city limits, in the EIR due to the timing of the projects. Mayor John Mirisch said that staff was not presenting objectivity by not including the project in the impact report.

Approximately 15 speakers addressed the council on this proposal with the vast majority in opposition of the overlay zone. Former Mayor Les Bronte spoke in favor of the proposal.

Leading the opposition was Ken Goldman, on behalf of the Southwest Homeowners Association. Goldman argued that the re-zoning proposal would increase the maximum building square footage to 327,600 feet, whereas currently there is only 73,000 square feet of development. Goldman said the S. Santa Monica Boulevard and Wilshire Boulevard intersection was already one of the worst in the city.
Beverly Hills Tennis Club to surprise Jefferson High School students with new uniforms

The Beverly Hills Tennis Club will host members of the Jefferson High School tennis teams for lunch at the club this Saturday, where the students will be surprised with new team uniforms.

“This whole program is to help increase self esteem in these students which will be enhanced by having great uniforms and great equipment and the last thing that’s part of our charge here is hopefully to create enthusiasm for students to participate in tennis or any other sport,” said Mitchell Dawson, president of the BHTC.

Dawson met with Communities in Schools, a nonprofit organization that identified Jefferson High School as a school in need of tennis equipment.

The boys’ and girls’ teams currently play without proper equipment or team uniforms. Initially, Dawson went to BHTC members requesting racket donations. However, through donations from BHTC members, over $8,000 were raised to purchase the team’s uniforms and additional equipment.

“At that time, it was really just tennis rackets. I knew we’d get tennis rackets, but I never thought we’d be able to get people so excited to help with funding [for] uniforms. That was like a fantasy that came true,” Dawson said.

Members of the club came forward with old tennis rackets, some in perfect condition and others in close to perfect condition, according to Dawson. Rackets that needed to be restrung were restrung and re-taped.

Dawson said the school has already received 40 rackets. The Jefferson boys and girls teams, 30 players, with their coaches and some faculty members, will join the BHTC for lunch this Saturday, and to the surprise of the students, receive uniforms in their school colors made by Nike, with the school’s logo and name, a pair of Nike tennis shoes,

They’re on a cell phone or they’re texting times very slowly, with no awareness or I’ve seen people at a red light or you’re doing to really take care of your health. of things such as exercise, diet, immuni- our overall theme going forward and really [or] we could have some sort of disaster, [and] to really make sure busi- into the community to do educate, to be a [the commission will be] trying to edu- cate people about the dangers of that. The other thing is we really wanted to look into and start identifying what are some of the special needs that the seniors of our community have in terms of health and safety? What we’d like to do is really come up with some programming and some information and look for ways that we could provide this information in already existing venues in the city, so perhaps looking at things like the farmers market or the Beverly Hills Active Adult Club.

Three new commissioners have been recently appointed by the city council. What will that transition be like? They have not joined us yet. We had a very unique situation when we first started. There were seven of us and we all started at the same time. Even though I had worked with most of those individuals or had known them in other opportunities, it was like a whole fresh slate. I have to say this is probably in both my personal and professional life one of the best experi- ences I have ever had because I got to know each of those individuals in a whole different way. There’s no ego involved and really in our commission what’s so wonderful about it is [that] it is really about the work -- being out in the street, going door to door, reaching out to busi- nesses, and educating and working with the neighborhood watch.

We have had our first new commission- ers because our first two rolled off and it is aper- tures believe because it’s been such a unique special experience working with the original seven, but now as we have our two new individuals, uniquely, they brought a different perspective, different interest, different expertise and were indi- viduals that were very active in health and safety issues on their own. It’s been a very seamless, kind of wonderful transition.

I think again it’ll be seamless. [The new commissioners] will bring new perspec- tives and fresh ideas. Because we’ve always focused on the work and getting involved, I’m sure it will be equally wonderful, but again I will miss my dear friends that will be leaving.

How did you become involved with the commission? I’m very lucky. I’ve been over at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center for over 25 years. In the department that I work in, I’ve had the ability to work directly with Dr. Linda Burns Bolton, Vice President and Chief Nursing Officer, Cedars-Sinai Health Systems. I grew up in Beverly Hills. I have deep roots here and ever since I’ve been young, being involved in the community was what role modeled to me. It’s a very important part of who I am. It’s a big part of nursing. You really need to know what you’re going on and be comfort- able reaching out and being a part of that. Many years ago, I worked with [City Director of Emergency Management] Pamela Mottice-Muller in a CPR program prior to the one [the city] has now. Many years ago, I worked in with WIC, I worked volunteer and help. They went to train the eighth graders before they went to Yosemite in CPR, so I was involved in some hands on training with that because I somehow got the word and was happy to do that.

When my own kids got to Beverly Vista, I felt there was really an opportunity during “Health and Safety Week” to pull it up a notch. The school was very open and luckily working with the Dr. Linda Burns Bolton, who has always supported my work personally in the community as well as my work at Cedars-Sinai allowed me to have time to develop with some of the other parents at the time and with Mottice- Muller a really great experience during safety week. With my colleague, we were able to develop a whole curriculum to go into Kindergarten through eighth grade, having an interactive health and safety experience for the children. They would invite us into the classrooms that they wanted and we would give a presentation during safety week. That was the first time I got involved.

In terms of community health, my job at Cedars-Sinai has evolved over the years. I’m the nurse liaison. Whenever we do a free community health screenings—and it could be that we go out and do free blood pressure screening, prostate screening, a variety of health screenings — I recruit and train all the nurses, so my job has become really community health. What I was doing personally, I was also doing professionally and again professionally, my boss really supported me in that opportunity. There’s a big need and I really wanted to do a variety of different venues. There’s always a very important element of education for the individuals [so] that they understand the information that they’re receiving and what the follow up needs to be. Unfortunately, there are many indi- viduals in Los Angeles County that may not have had or did not have their own healthcare practitioner, so we also provide referrals for them to get services or to fol- low up with the care that they need.

My job is really the coordination. My job is essentially no matter what program Cedars-Sinai Medical Center is doing, there’s always a very important element of education for the individuals [so] that they understand the information that they’re receiving and what the follow up needs to be. Unfortunately, there are many indi- viduals in Los Angeles County that may not have had or did not have their own healthcare practitioner, so we also provide referrals for them to get services or to fol- low up with the care that they need.

You are simultaneously serving as the president of The Maple Counseling Center. What’s new at the TMCC? The biggest issue right now that we’re facing is really our location. We are hop- ing to stay because for over 40 years, we have been in Beverly Hills. Actually growing up here my mother was one of the original para- professional counselors involved with The Maple Counseling Center in a professional sense. She took training over at UCLA to become a para-professional and provide counseling services. After my father died in 1994 — It was before there was a lot of information on care giving — what I real- ized was that people caring for a loved one at home really didn’t have a lot of resourc- es. I developed a program at Cedars-Sinai for a while where people could call in who needed help doing math and teaching them to go out into our schools and community to provide education.

I just really loved this and I was infor- mally doing a lot of these kind of things and when this opportunity came up to do it in a more formalized way I just thought, “Boy, this has my name on it.” It seemed like a perfect match for what I was already doing in the community.

What are your goals for the commission as chair? I think, number one that we continue on with the work that we’re doing. I think highlighting the new areas such as pedestrian safety [and] a healthy lifestyle. What can we do as individuals and as families to really pay attention to access the services that we need? I agree with my co-commissioner that there really is a need to reach out and look at. [Another goal is] to work seamlessly with our new incoming commissioners and [make] sure that they’re comfortable and can hit that ground running and that everybody on the commission continues to enjoy that expe- rience and really make a difference.

You are a registered nurse and education programs coordinator at Cedars-Sinai. Tell us about that. I really have the perfect job for me and it’s very interesting. I’m an education pro- grams coordinator at the Geri and Richard Steinberg Institute on Aging at Cedars Sinai Medical Center. I get to work with and teach in a variety of different programs related to nursing professional develop- ment. But the main part of my job is bring- ing together all of the things in the world that I love and that are community services and being a nurse. I am, as I said, the nurse liaison for community health education screening programs. The Department of Community Health and Education [works] with our community partners throughout Los Angeles County. Some of them are senior centers, churches, temples, and [other] different venues. They work with them to decide what kind of program and health screening we will provide and each of these programs provides not just an actual physical screening, such as blood pressure or diabetes screenings, but there’s always a very important element of education for the individuals [so] that they understand the information that they’re receiving and what the follow up needs to be. Unfortunately, there are many indi- viduals in Los Angeles County that may not have had or did not have their own healthcare practitioner, so we also provide referrals for them to get services or to fol- low up with the care that they need.

quality is wonderful. It’s not just services in terms of individuals or family counseling, there’s also group opportunities. We provide services at the school level. I think the biggest issue right now is we really need to settle on our home so we’re currently negotiating and hoping we’ll be able to stay here. It looks like there’s not a lot of opportunity, just economically, within the city at this time so we may need to move outside the borders, but Beverly Hills adjacent. We’re very mindful and regardless, there will be no interruption of services.

In addition to continuing our excellent services and programs, we’re having our biggest fundraiser [Endless Summer Bash] on Oct. 30. We have also brought on Jamie Powell who is our development director and I think [she] brings a new energy and perspective. I’m very excited about Jamie helping us reach out into the community and really make people aware that this is a valuable resource and treasure. I think with mental health, it really matters, but I think it’s a subject that people aren’t really sure of or comfortable with.

What are your priorities as president of the board?

As president of the board, number one, making sure we have a stable permanent home. That’s really important and weighing on my mind and [also] that we continue to have the funds that we need to continue the work of The Maple Counseling Center. We are a fundraising board and that is important. [A priority is that we] continue to reach out to new friends, reconnect with old friends and really make sure we have the means to continue the important work.

Your husband John Millan served on the Board of Education from 2003-2007. Do you have any interest in running for office?

It was a wonderful experience for John, I think, seeing his own personal growth and just the integrity that he and his other board members brought to the process. What was nice was that it was about the work and really doing the best for our children. It was phenomenal.

You know, it’s an interesting question. I really never thought about it. Who knows? I think the truth is whether it’s that or something else, I would hope I will always stay involved in the community because that was the way I was raised. I’m fortunate enough to have a wonderful husband of 35 years—we just celebrated our anniversary [Tuesday]. I think what’s so wonderful is we’ve always supported each other so I know whether he goes on and continues to do things or I do, that we will be there for each other. Our kids have been terrific over the years of being a part of that and I would hope until the day I die that I’m doing something whether it is in an official capacity or not. That is really a key important part of who I am is doing what I can do to really make a difference and leave the world a little better off if I can.

Tell us about your family.

I grew up here in Beverly Hills. My parents are [the late] Paul and Barbara Miller, and I have three wonderful siblings that are all still here in Los Angeles. I have two brothers and a sister. My immediate family is John and we’ve been together for 35 years and we met in college. John graduated the year before I did but at graduation we became engaged and then started our life here in California. When it was time for [our kids to go to] school, we realized that nobody used public school and that was really important to both John and I, so that really was our impetus to move to Beverly Hills. I had a wonderful childhood here in Beverly Hills. My mom and dad were very involved in scouting. My mom was the PTA president. She’s 80 and she still gets together with the PTA presidents. It was a wonderful time and place because my dad walked the entire neighborhood to school. It was like a small village and John and I came back and I’ve found that we’ve been very lucky. We have two daughters. Caitlin is 28. She went to Hofstra University and came back after she graduated and while she doesn’t live at home, interestingly, she works at Concord Music Group [in Beverly Hills], so even though she’s an adult on her own, she’s not far from home. My daughter Mackenzie graduated Indiana University a year and a half ago and when she came back last August, she had an internship with Mottice-Muller and her big project was the CERT program. She’s just started a new job at American Jewish University as an admissions counselor. This is her ideal job because when she was at Indiana, a big part of what she did was lead the freshman tours, so she is very excited.

A year from now, what do you hope to have accomplished in your leadership roles at the TMCC and on the commission?

I [hope] that all the work that we’ve identified, we’re well on our way [and] that we’re successful with it. I think at The Maple Counseling Center that we’ve increased the visibility, highlighted the importance and really gotten people engaged to support the work of The Maple Counseling Center. I think that’s really important. I would hope that we are so successful that we continue to look and add more programs but more importantly that we really keep with our mission, which is to never turn away anyone because we don’t. If they can’t afford it, we still work with them. With the commission, [I hope] that we continue with the goals [and] the work that we’ve set out to do and that we really make people more aware of doing a better job of taking care of their health and safety [and] that we not only care for each other but as a community, we continue to work to really build a better stronger community that’s more aware of health and safety issues.
