Measures Y, HH defeated

Measures Y and HH were defeated by the voters during Tuesday's election.

Measure Y, a $270 million BHUSD bond, required a 66.67 percent majority to pass after the Board of Education Vice President Mel Spitz and Board member Isabel Hacker voted against placing the measure on the ballot in a 3-2 vote in August 2016. It received 63.85 percent as of press time.

Measure HH, the Hilton Condominium Tower Initiative, was soundly defeated. (See chart below.) The initiative, proposed by Beverly Hilton developer Beny Alagem, intended to bypass the City planning process to gain approval for the construction of a 375 foot residential building. It received only 44.25 percent as of press time.

"We stated from the beginning that we wanted the residents to decide what would be built in the future," said Hilton spokesperson Marie Garvey. "Right now, it looks like they want the 2008 plan built and if that result holds that is exactly what we will do. We are tremendously grateful for all the hard work and support of thousands of residents and proud of our efforts."

Garvey had no comment on whether the Hilton plans to pursue a referendum pending the City Council's decision to approve neighboring project "One Beverly Hills" proposed by the Wanda Group. See our story below.

"One Beverly Hills" spends three days before City Council

The Wanda Group presented its project "One Beverly Hills" to City Council in a series of meetings throughout the week, beginning on Monday, Nov. 7 and continuing to Wednesday, Nov. 9. The Council voted 4-1 to prepare a resolution, which will be presented at the next meeting expected to be held on Nov. 21. Vice Mayor Nancy Krasne dissented.

The proposed "One Beverly Hills" project consists of modifications to the previously approved 9900 Wilshire Specific Plan.

In 2008, the City approved Wanda for the construction of 235 residential condominiums and over 15,000 square feet of commercial space along the north side of Santa Monica Boulevard and Merv Griffin Way.

The amendments approved by a 3-1 vote by the Planning Commission on Oct. 19 reduce the number of condominiums from 235 to 193 to incorporate a luxury hotel.

The Commission held a total of seven meetings to consider "One Beverly Hills," according to the staff report.

All five Commissioners unanimously supported the overall concept of a use change from condominiums to hotel, the use of a Supplemental Environmental Impact Report instead of conducting an entirely new EIR, and the general quality of the architectural design of the buildings themselves.

However, these recommendations made by the Commission were not final decisions, as final decision rests with the Council.

BHUSD Board of Education member Lisa Korbatov and Superintendent Steve Kessler came before the Council to ask for additional compensation to the $1 million they have already received from Wanda for the impacts at El Rodeo School.

"As you know, there [are] going to be impacts at El Rodeo," Korbatov said. "There are already impacts to everything. This project is going to be bigger. It's going to require more truck trips in and out. It's going to require more dirt being removed. [It] increases the schedule significantly for the kids at El Rodeo. We think [the compensation package] should be raised. I don't want

Traffic & Parking Commission works on consolidating preferential parking permit zones

City staff returned to the Traffic and Parking Commission on Nov. 3 to provide options and alternatives on how to proceed with streamlining the preferential parking permit petition process to create districts with uniform parking regulations.

In August 2016, the Commission received a presentation from staff on the previous attempts to consolidate the parking preferential zones by creating districts. The last attempt to create parking districts was around 2004, according to Transportation Planner Martha Eros.

The Commissioners previously suggested staff identify areas that may be potential districts, meaning preferential parking permit zones with similar parking characteristics. Staff presented a draft map at the Nov. 3 meeting with 20 preliminary zoning suggestions.

There are currently 73 existing preferential parking permit zones in the City covering approximately 170 residential street blocks, according to the staff report.

The current Municipal Code on preferential parking states "a resident who holds a valid preferential parking permit may use the permit for the purpose of parking on the street block adjacent to the dwelling unit of such resident or adjacent to the dwelling unit of another resident who resides in the same preferential parking zone while they are visiting such resident."

If the Commissioners intend to allow residents in a particular district to park in any of the streets within the same district, then the Municipal Code needs to be amended, according to the staff report.

Chair Jake Manaster suggested there are too many zones, causing confusion for residents and the enforcement officers.

"The [purpose of the] district is to consolidate the regulations, so enforcement can more accurately occur in a faster fashion,"

Manaster said. "Its deterrent effect is that the neighborhoods remain quieter, calmer and have less intrusion [with fewer] citations."

Challenges discussed by the Commissioners included impacted use from local businesses and restaurants and regulation of residents with valid permits parking on adjacent blocks on an occasional basis.

"I see that there is a need for change," said Commissioner Nooshin Meshkaty. "I don't necessarily know if this is going to solve our problems. But the bigger problem is the enforcement."

Manaster explained in 2004 a similar program did not progress due to "a lack of urgency" regarding traffic calming. Since, resources have become "taxed" and Manaster was in favor of pursuing a new solution.

"I would like to see us be more efficient," Manaster said "and maybe more helpful to people who truly are struggling to drag five bags of groceries from three blocks away, yet they live where they've lived for 30 years and deserve to be able to park closer and should if we were more organized."

Next steps will include community outreach and a proposed work plan.

coverstory CALIFORNIA CUISINE

Chef Geoffrey Zakarian makes his west coast debut at Montage Beverly Hills

By Madelyn Pariser

Earlier this year, you made your Los Angeles debut with two new restaurants, Georgie and The Garden Bar, at Montage Beverly Hills. How did the hotel inspire your two latest projects?

It was a collaborative [effort]. [Montage] wanted to do something with three meals a day and opened all day long. I saw the space [and] the garden, which is beautiful, and it's a very special spot. There's this long, expansive garden, so it's very special to begin with. I wanted to work off of that and do something that feels like the Mediterranean. South of France; something expansive, lovely and fragrant.

A word that came to mind was "fragrance" because of how beautiful it was. We started from that spot. We wanted to do something that was very chic [and also] California inspired.

What is your favorite part about Beverly Hills?

I'm from New York City. [I've] been there for 36 years. Los Angeles is like three or four cities in one, compared to New York, which is like one giant metropolis.

You drive from the confines of Beverly Hills into a major city. You're sharing space with skyscrapers and beautiful, luxurious homes. It's very different from what I'm used to, so that's what I enjoy about it; also the sensibility of having a very sprawling, dynamic urban suburb.

Beverly Hills has so much heritage and history, it's divine.

What are the differences and similarities between the restaurant industries on the east and west coasts?

The restaurant industry is one of the toughest industries there is. It's a passion play for most people, to be very honest. It's very difficult to be successful for long periods of time. You have to really like what you're doing in this business otherwise you'll get beaten up because you're going to get beaten up anyway.

You have to have the passion [because] L.A. and New York are [both] filled with great chefs that have so much dedication to their craft. You're swimming in a rarified pool of talent.

It's been a delight to find out the beautiful intricacies of L.A. [In L.A.] it's difficult to traverse all this territory. That being said, we're all united in passion, flavor and remarkable concepts that are very modern and forward thinking. The two cities on the coasts are really smashing and doing a great job.

In 2014, the Weekly interviewed Montage General Manager Todd Orlich who said "we're right in the middle of the City, so you walk literally out the door and you have Spago, Maestro's and Bouchon. They're the most well known brands of restaurants in the world." What makes your concepts with Montage unique from the classics in Beverly Hills?

I always think of reinventing something. I never think of coming up with a "one hit wonder." My mind doesn't work like that. I live in a way that's classic. It's not something [I] use for a trend; I'm not riding a wave in Beverly Hills at Georgie.

I'm doing something that's long term and I always think long term. I want it to be a successful restaurant for Montage and I want to be a successful partner with that sensibility because they have such a great presence in Beverly Hills. It speaks volumes more than I could speak alone, so it's a great partnership.

I'm in this tremendous space and I'm very honored. It's a large chunk of real estate, so you really have to understand who you are first and be very focused on what you're doing because you cannot be everything to everyone. It's just not possible.

The most successful restaurants define their personality and are comfortable with their personality and they're confident that they don't have to go out and be something they're not.

That's the vision I always take whenever I open [a new project].

There are some great restaurants around me. Spago, for one, is just a restaurant that is striking and perfectly embodies what I just mentioned about being themselves and being confident.

You wear many hats, including Food Network star, Iron Chef, and product designer. How have these different roles sine?

I'm a chef. I'm also a father. I'm a restaurateur, and I'm a businessman. I'm very I want to pass on a successful company to my [children], if they want it. I'm in the restaurant business because I love it and love what I do.

I'm a chef, number one, and all the things I do around [that] make sense. Food network and shows like "Chopped" and "Chopped Junior" are very educational, I try to teach. The products are an extension of how I [operate] my restaurants, so it's all very connected. There are two or three degrees of separation, at most, away from my core soul which is cooking.

It's a lot of work and I'm very busy, and I'm also blessed.

Cooking is something very personal. I'm always thinking of how to go forward. The older you get with more experience, it's very easy to think of what you did in the past and try to do more of that. But I think that your mind has to always go forward because you have nothing but the future in front of you. You have to use the past as a reference point, but jump forward all the time.

I'm entertained by a lot of things around me, but the cooking is very prominent for me because it's my foundation. I'm constantly seeking out ways to experience more modern things in my cooking. It informs the rest of what I do with my life.

What are your goals for your two new restaurants in Beverly Hills?

I have very simple goals. I would love for us to be opened for as long as possible. The realities of the business that we're in are extraordinarily difficult, so if [the restaurants] are successful, if Montage is successful, the people and the customers really love sitting there and they feel good about the place then that is really all I can ask.

There are so many great restaurants opening all the time, so [my goal is] to have a sense of lineage and history showing that you've been around a long time and people have returned to you.

priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information.
