"The Making of the Mayor" [Issue 442]

Concerning your recent interview with Beverly Hills Mayor Barry Brucker, it is most unfortunate that he chose to make some particularly offensive comments that overshadowed his other more informative and insightful responses.

While talking about our school district's layoffs, Mr. Brucker is quoted as saying, "The teachers who are being pink-slipped are oftentimes your youngest, newest, most energetic and inspirational young teachers who love what they are doing. I wish there was a way that the school district had the ability to let go of some of our veteran teachers who are burnt out, angry, and probably not very productive... Our focus needs to be on inspiring young people to learn." I strongly object to Mr. Brucker's negative characterization of some of our community's teachers. His words recklessly attempt to pit younger teachers and older teachers against one another. His words play on tired stereotypes of older employees and completely neglect veteran teachers' vast experience as an asset and inspiration to student learning. Mr. Brucker offers no evidence or facts to support his spurious accusation that alleges some veteran teachers of being angry, unproductive, and unmotivated. His words are divisive and unbecoming of an elected public official.

If the Beverly Hills community wants our schools to be successful, then we need to have respect for all the teachers who play a pivotal role in this success. We need to flatly reject Mr. Brucker's morale-killing comments and instead focus on how we can celebrate, encourage, and capitalize on the vast teacher and student talent that we are so fortunate to possess in our schools right now.

Southwest Homeowners Association met Monday to discuss developments

Helplessness was the general tone of a Southwest Homeowners' Association meeting held March 24. Faced with new developments threatening to engulf the area on all sides and a City Council that seems to them overly friendly to the ideas of development and revenue generation, residents were doubtful their voices carried any weight.

When urged to appear and speak at a future Council meeting, one resident anxiously asked, "But will they listen?"

The Association represents the area bordered by Wilshire Blvd. to the north, Beverly Drive to the East, Olympic Blvd. to the south and Century City to the west. The Beverly Hilton and 9900 Wilshire Projects, were already concerning in that residents fear they will aggravate the already congested intersection of Santa Monica and Wilshire Blvds. - the fourthworst in the nation, according to Association President Ken Goldman.

In addition, upcoming projects include a planned Roxbury Park renovation on the south border, and a 45-story condo tower and a recently announced 49-story mall expansion in Century City. Another condo development was planned for the area around Saks Fifth Avenue on Peck Drive near the area's northern border, but the Planning Commission unanimously rejected the proposal last week. Association members were not enthusiastic, however, speculating the developers would appeal to the City Council, who would agree to the project.

The Association's biggest fear seems to come from the East and in currently nonexistent development projects.

Possible revisions to the General Plan include a 50 percent increase to the currently permissible Floor Area Ratio on South Beverly Drive and a 150 percent

Council packs extra meetings into upcoming weeks

Beverly Hilton and 9900 Wilshire Projects create citywide debate

By Lauren Gabbaian

Council meetings to discuss the pending 9900 Wilshire and Hilton projects are now in full swing with sessions scheduled twice a week for the next month, in an attempt to contain the demolition process to the months of El Rodeo's summer vacation. Both developments are for lots across the street from the school.

March 20's special Council meeting, dealing mostly with the 9900 Wilshire Project, was the first in the whirlwind schedule, and councilmember Nancy Krasne was not pleased about the corresponding lack of time she'd had to prepare.

"I will ask all developers on all projects," Krasne said, "Do not blindside me with material the night before the meeting and expect me to be real happy to have just gotten it."

The meeting began its discussion of the 9900 Project with the culmination of developers Candy & Candy's presentation, which was interrupted at the March 11 Special Meeting due to technical problems with the City's cable television station.

The developers offered different experts to comment on financial benefits to the city, air quality impacts and mitigation, and the project's architectural design.

The financial consultant explained benefits including an up-front fee of $52 million, part of which will be used for environmental impact mitigation at El Rodeo and for a low-income housing fund, and an estimated $3.6 million in annual revenue to the City once all condo units are sold.

The environmental consultant, who had previously worked on construction projects at Beverly High and Beverly Vista, assured the Council of the developers' dedication to children's health at any cost.

Both architect Michael Palladino and developer Chris Candy tried to alleviate the stigma of the epithet of the two buildings, which, taken together, measure almost 900 feet in width: "The Wall."

"It is a piece of art," Candy said. "The subtlety of the architecture is breathtaking. The two buildings of 9900 Wilshire are categorically not monolithic slabs."

He also offered that six of the project's

He also offered that six of the project's eight acres would be landscaping. But Councilmember Jimmy Delshad was not satisfied, insisting the space between the buildings be increased.

Councilmembers, however, still had several concerns about the project.

Councilmember Linda Briskman expressed her dissatisfaction at the removal of smaller residences on the ground floor of the project's south side, called "garden residences" or simply "lofts," claiming the pool would not get enough privacy and that the area seemed "unfinished" without them. After one resident expressed his disapproval of such changes to the Planning Commission's recommendations, she specified the residences would be reinserted only with an equivalent removal of square footage from the taller tower.

In response to one of Delshad's questions, Candy denied allegations he is funded by Middle Eastern sources, affirming instead that his equity comes from CPC Group, a private-equity company that is owned by Candy himself, and the Icelandic Kaupthing Bank.

The Council further expressed concerns about the environmental impacts at El Rodeo and in the neighboring residential areas and the discrepancy between estimates of financial benefits to the City offered by the Planning Commission and the developers.

The Beverly Hilton had its introductory meeting less than a week later on March 25. The standing-room-only meeting lasted until nearly midnight and featured presentations by Hilton owner and developer Beny Alagem and the rest of his team, and about 40 audience speakers, many of whom wore pro-Hilton stickers.

A particularly divisive move on the part of the developers and the City Staff was to reject the Planning Commission's unanimous recommendation to completely remove the project's "A Building" and reduce the height of the Waldorf Astoria. Instead, both Staff and the developer propose the reinstatement of the "A Building," albeit smaller and in a slightly different position. The developer further proposed an extra two stories on the Waldorf Astoria building, which would go with a corresponding reduction in the poolside cabana rooms.

Both meetings featured many audience speakers, both for and against the projects.

El Rodeo parent Red Richmond brought her two sons to the Hilton meeting to make an appeal about the air quality in the area of the school. Board of Education member Myra Lurie and Noushin Meshkaty made similar statements, the former pointing out the lack of mitigation tactics in the current Environmental Impact Report (EIR).

North Homeowners' Association member Darian Bojeaux was one of many who have suggested bringing the projects to a community vote.

Among many in support of the project were long-time resident and former CEO of Arden Realty Richard Ziman and former UC Regent Joanne Kozberg.

increase on the south side of Wilshire Blvd. This would mean increased height on new buildings and, the homeowners fear, increased density and traffic. Though Mayor Barry Brucker, who attended the meeting along with Planning Commission Chair Noah Furie, claimed increased height and increased density do not necessarily have to go together, comparing the density of similarly sized commercial and residential buildings, but the Association wasn't so sure.

"No one in his right mind believes that's going to be condominiums," Goldman said. "It's going to be department stores. It's going to be offices."

Ultimately, though many seemed resigned to Goldman's idea the Council is "raising revenue at our expense," Goldman persisted in encouraging members to speak against the developments and plans for the General Plan at future Council meetings.

"The only place we can fight is in Beverly Hills," Goldman said. "The only place we have pressure is on the mayor and the other four councilmembers."

Global family uses Facebook to unite for a cause

Though living halfway around the world in Paris, Beverly High class of '03 graduate Cece Gabbay has found a way to contribute to the schools in the city where she grew up.

Her mom, Myra, has been involved in the community effort to encourage the City Council to increase the Joint Powers Agreement (JPA) as a means of compensating for recent statewide budget cuts.

The JPA acts as a kind of leasing agreement between the City and BHUSD. In exchange for some $9 million per year, the City may use school grounds when class is not in session. Holding March 18's Mayoral Installation ceremony at Beverly High is one example of how the agreement is utilized.

Myra handed out slogan stickers at the Mayoral

Installation, and, along with other residents such as Lori Gordon, is sending e-mails and making calls to encourage people to sign the petition in support of a more robust JPA.

"We look at it as if we're trying to support [all the negotiators] and show them the community is behind them and the community supports the concept of the JPA and supports the concept of increasing the JPA," said Myra, who is also a Beverly graduate.

Though in Paris, Cece still felt the desire to help her alma mater.

"Basically my mom and I are extremely extremely close. We talk every day, multiple times a day, e-mail all the time," Cece said. So basically what happened was my mom just told me that she's sending out all these e-mails to everyone in the community."

Turning to popular social networking website Facebook, Cece and her brother Ben created a group called "No money, mo problems: BH remix" and supplied a simple explanation of the JPA for the largely college-aged audience and how they could help. Through this group, the siblings have been able to reach friends and acquaintances all over the world, though only those registered to vote in Beverly Hills may sign the petition. Myra has told her daughter she has gotten signatures as a result of the group, which boasts 118 members as of press time.

Mayor Barry Brucker is enthusiastic about the effort.

"I'm a huge fan and supporter of our school district, having served seven and a half years on the School Board, and witnessing my own two children's tremendous success K-12 through the school system. So I'm a big fan," Brucker said

On the other hand, blogger John Mirisch, who edits the website blogbeverlyhills.com favors increasing the JPA only on the condition that out-of-district permits be decreased proportionately.

"Otherwise what you're essentially doing is taking local Beverly Hills taxpayer money and you're using it to subsidize L.A. kids," Mirisch said.

"It is key that our schools remain community-based and that money that the city gives for the benefit of the schools, which is undoubtedly a wonderful thing, that that's used for Beverly Hills kids."

Both Myra Gabbay and Brucker feel the permit issue is not relevant to these community efforts.

Angry Words, Angry People and Hayman Backs Waldorf

By Rudy Cole

"A man can't be too careful in the choice of enemies," Oscar Wilde.

Some of the more interesting battles taking place in our village have histories that are seldom if ever discussed. What follows may surprise or even anger you.

What is really behind the North Homeowner's fight with city hall or the recent attacks on the Beverly Hills Chamber of Commerce, unleashed last week in our Big Sister, the Courier?

North first. No question, many of the organization's members genuinely feel that the city is going, if not to the puppies, to the developers. But even the most dedicated and angry followers must feel some qualms at the barrage of personal, frenetic attacks on our elected officials contained in their leaflets.

How off the wall are their words? Southwest of Beverly Hills Homeowner Association president Ken Goldman, a community activist never shy about expressing strongly held feelings, made it clear last week that even though he might well share some of the North HOA's views on pending projects, he would not want the Southwest to be part of a campaign of personal vilification.

Goldman warned the North that he could not support a ballot measure, even though he might support the purposes - overturning council actions on some pending projects, if the North wasn't far more moderate. Goldman is to be commended for seeing the North personal attacks for what they are: A distraction from the real debate.

What many members of the North may not understand is that they are being used. Some very few of their leaders have a very private agenda: Getting even with city government and our police. It was the police association that led a successful battle to defeat one of their key leaders when he ran for reelection to the city council.

Want another historical paradox? When our police were under attack, the community rallied to their support. Who organized the citizen support group? Ken Goldman, South HOA president. Who was the councilmember the police worked to defeat for reelection? Robert

K. Tanenbaum, North HOA president. (In the interests of full disclosure, this columnist served as a member of the steering committee of Goldman's "Police and Community Together.")

The other battle? The Beverly Hills Chamber of Commerce and Civic Association versus the Beverly Hills Courier: This fight is also driven by personal hurts, real and self-inflicted, and it too detracts from the real problems facing the Chamber, the target of the Courier attacks.

In case you missed it, last Friday the Courier devoted a full page to several stories, "exposes," on issues the paper has with the organization that represents the business community. Interesting month for the Courier: One week it is attacked by the North HOA for its own tough words about that association and the following Friday it goes after the Chamber. (Somewhat recklessly, this column actually defended the Courier's publisher, Clif Smith.)

What were the Courier's hidden motives? Here too, very, very personal.

The Courier publisher wanted to be appointed to the board of directors of the Chamber, and was not accepted. Hell hath no fury as a publisher spurned.

Early last year, the Courier publisher had two problems with the Chamber, being named to the board only the first. When the Chamber and some city officials made their annual business and tourist promotion visit to New York, Smith asked to be included in all meetings.

The Chamber turned him down. The tourist sessions were for hospitality industry professionals and not open to Chamber officers and members, but the visits with companies having or interested in business opportunities in Beverly Hills were more inclusive.

Who was right, who was wrong? Although it would have been a stretch, Smith should have disclosed the personal reasons that just might have influenced his anti-Chamber "news" stories. However, was it good policy for the Chamber to reject his desire to be a member of their board of directors, and should he have been included in at least some of the New York meetings?

Almost every Chamber of Commerce in the country has newspaper publishers on their boards. When Walter Harris was co-publisher of the Beverly Hills Post, he was a board member as was former Courier publisher and owner, March Schwartz.

Smith and Weekly publisher Josh Gross, representing the only two newspapers in Beverly Hills with a legal adjudication, should be on the board, Gross being very unlikely to accept.

A more complicated problem is the role of newspaper people who serve on boards or attend meetings. One Chamber leader explained that the Chamber board often discussed sensitive personnel issues and financial matters and having a publisher present could be inhibiting. This should never be a problem. If a newspaper person attends a so-called private meeting, he or she agrees in advance not to report on what is discussed or they decide to excuse themselves. Happens all the time. But the Courier and the Weekly are also businesses with economic con-

The more fundamental questions are the validity of the Smith anti-Chamber allegations. The questions the Courier raised about financial support from the city, failure to permit Courier access to financial records and other matters of even less concern, do not go to the heart of some fundamental problems the Chamber faces.

First, this Chamber under the leadership of Dan Walsh, executive director, and Anita Zusman Eddy, director of economic development, and the present board, are certainly the most effective Chamber we have had in many years. There are exciting new Chamber programs and services not the least of which is the attention to the South Beverly Drive business section, an area long neglected by the city and past Chamber leaders.

The city is doing an audit of the Chamber, but that study should examine some past blunders that tossed millions into promotions of little or no value.

Every year, it seemed, past councils would fall in love with some new advertising agency with a new approach to branding the name Beverly Hills.

If by now the name Beverly Hills is not recognized, we need to change it to Azusa (stands for, Everything in the USA from A to Z.) What we have always needed was more reasons for tourists to come here, not name recognition. This was the direction the city Marketing Committee with some icons such as Richard Rosenzweig, Ali Kasikci, Jerry Magnin and Fred Hayman wanted to promote until a past Chamber executive director helped scuttle that great committee. I remember actually spotting a Chamber billboard promoting our city, far from a freeway, in a low income area in the Valley. And whose idea was the "Visit Beverly Hills" for our spas promotion?

This is a good Chamber, but there are needs and problems. Walsh, as we said, is a highly competent manager, but it is somewhat ingenuous for him to keep insisting, as he did in the Courier blast, that the "Chamber receives no money from the city." Technically, maybe. The funding goes to tourist and business promotion, but that money also pays for salaries and mutual expenses and the council understands it is money "for the Chamber."

Taking city money, and our Chamber probably receives more support from our city than any other Chamber anywhere, is inhibiting, even if necessary.

The Chamber does become, in many ways, an arm of city government.

We too have some issues: It is really inexplicable that the Chamber offices are closed on weekends when visitors might want information on retailers, hotels and restaurants. It is strange that the Chamber locks the doors on the Friday after Thanksgiving, the heaviest shopping day of the year and it is not acceptable that tourist information booths aren't placed at strategic locations in the business sector. Now, the Chamber is following city practices of reducing staff on alternating Fridays. Not good for business folks.

The Chamber is, in many ways, a work in progress, and reinventing itself.

It knew what would come when it rejected Smith, and that might be seen as courageous, but was it smart? Time to end petty agendas and personal hurts and move on.

One of our most powerful influence molders, Fred Hayman, who seldom if ever is involved in divisive controversies, has lent his name in support of the Waldorf Astoria, Beverly Hilton proposal. Hayman began his fabulous career in the hotel industry and, of course, he was one of the primary inventors of Rodeo Drive. His endorsement of the Hilton/Waldorf Astoria will have very significant impact on the whole council.

Initially, I had strong reservations about the early Hilton plan. The then project would have actually reduced rooms while adding height for condos.

But the later introduction of the Waldorf Astoria name changed everything.

As for condos, the housing element is probably the only reason the project can fly. Almost every new hotel development anywhere in the world now has a condominium element. Why? Lending institutions simply are reluctant to finance hotels without condos. Loan repayments based on hotel income are not sufficient for banks. They want the assurance of a quicker turn around, and that comes from condo sales. If we want a landmark Waldorf Astoria at Wilshire and Santa Monica, we need to face realities and approve the condo additions. Side bar: Condo owners will use hotel services and that means even more tax bucks for our

BHEA President Chris Bushée finds chemistry with job and life in the Weekly's exclusive interview

By Lauren Gabbaian

Historically the job of BHEA [teachers' union] President has been kind of onerous and something not a lot of teachers have wanted to take up. What do you like about it?

First, I don't consider this job to be onerous. I consider it to be exciting and rewarding and very necessary for mem-

I started out as vice president five years ago, and what drew me into it at the time was I wanted to give back to my union, I wanted to contribute, and at the time I thought I had a lot to offer in the area of negotiations. I also have people – veteran union members - who were encouraging me to get involved and talked about the rewards that giving back to the union had produced for them, and I thought this would be something I would enjoy doing. So I had the support of my union brethren, and I also just had the curiosity and the desire to just want to contribute. Since then I've never looked back. It's been really great and wonderful, and I'm just so happy that I've had this opportunity to represent and safeguard the rights of over 300 teachers here in Beverly Hills. I really believe strongly in the profession. I believe that teachers are wonderful people, very selfless in doing very very important work. I just think education has got to be the world's number-one business. We all have a vested interest in having a highly educated population, and so it feels exciting and just wonderful to be part of that process.

Regarding the recent budget cuts that have resulted in the noticing of 35 certificated teaching positions districtwide - You've said a few times that you are unsatisfied with how the district handled the situation. How would you have handled it differently?

There are a couple of main criticisms that teachers have with the way this has

The sheer amount of the cuts was more than needed to be done. I am hoping, because I know that [Board member] Brian Goldberg talked about it at the last Board meeting, that we've got a window of opportunity now. We have until May 15 to look at some of the cuts that were made and see if maybe we can pull back, see if the District can reverse some of the teacher cuts.

Everybody understands here, including

BHEA, that some cuts need to be made, but we believe that the level of cuts that were made was too deep. But the layoff notices do not need to be acted upon formally until May 15. So we have all of April and half of May to take some time and do a more-detailed analysis of what the impact of all of these cuts that we've approved is going to be and see if we can do something to mitigate that impact by hiring back a few of the teachers that were cut. At the end of the day, BHEA believes that when you cut classroom teachers, it's bad for students. It's bad for student learning, it increases class sizes, and it's just a negative all the way around. So we need to make sure that all the cuts that happen are minimized.

In addition, the disparity between the level of cuts made to classroom teachers versus the level of cuts made to administrators - particularly District administrators - is very very large. We're talking about cutting 32 teacher positions - that's about 10 percent of all of the teachers in the district - and only one half-time administrator is going to be out of a job come 2008-2009. One half-time management position out of approximately 30 management positions. That works out to be about 2 percent. So it's 10 percent of the teachers were cut, but only 2 percent of the administrators were cut? It's not even close! That disparity is huge, and teachers believe that is not right for kids. Across the different employee groups, there must be shared suffering. It is a morale killer when you cut disproportionately in the non-management employee ranks, and you cut very lightly in the management ranks. It makes it look like the people in power are protecting themselves at the expense of the defenseless employees.

According to a handout you circulated at the Feb. 26 Board of Education meeting, BHUSD spends proportionately the highest amount of money in administrative costs per student, compared to similar districts in L.A. County. How do you feel about this?

What that means is, other districts have found ways to administer the business of their school districts in a much more economical way. The goal here should be to get as many of those precious dollars into classrooms as possible. Administration of a district is certainly important, and every district needs that. I something like $450 of administration costs per student, and ours was about $900 - twice the average. What that tells me is that our district has shifted dollars out of the classroom and into administration, and they need to find ways to shift those dollars back into the classroom.

What are some myths about the teachers' union that you'd like to dispel?

I think some people may believe there's a difference between the teachers' union and the teachers, and that could not be farther from the truth. I think 99-pointsomething percent of all the teachers in this district are members of the Beverly Hills Education Association. We are a wholly unified group of employees. Anytime somebody says something good or somebody says something bad about "the union," then they're saying something good and saying something bad about all 300 teachers of this district. And that's the way representative organizations

It's also important to say that the teachers' union is viewed as just the teachers are looking out for themselves, and somehow when they do that they don't have the students' best interests at heart. I have worked in this district for 11 years, and I have been in BHEA leadership for close to five, and I can't recall any circumstances where a teacher that I've known or interacted with has either said directly or had actions that indicated they were going to do something for themselves that they knew was going to be bad for students.

I think it's important that when teachers advocate for their rights and for good working conditions, they're doing this because their heart is in the classroom. their heart is with the students. This is evidenced by the mountains of papers the teachers take home to grade, it's evidenced by the extra hours the teachers will spend before or after school helping students, it's evidenced by the passion the teachers bring to the curriculum. It's just evidenced in so many ways that we know that by having the right resources and the respect for our profession that this is right for kids, it's right for the classroom. So when teachers stick up for themselves, we're also sticking up for the students we care so deeply about. doing this for the students we

I understand your two children are students at Beverly. What's it like being the union President and also a BHUSD parent?

I have been very careful not to be nosy with my kids, especially since they've been here at the high school. So I'm not constantly coming into their classes or going to talk to their counselors about things. I try not to intrude any more than think the average for the 21 districts was a regular parent would in my now-teenage kids' lives here. I'm very sensitive to that and I don't want there to be any resentment. And I believe my wife and I have been able to be responsible parents for our kids here in the schools without misusing the conveniences of both working here in the District.

> Both my wife and I have taken pains to make sure that we're not advertising the fact that our kids are in a particular class. Because my children have a different last name than I do, there will be times my kids will go through a whole year of school with a particular teacher, and only after my kids have left the class do the teachers come to realize they had my kids

Your wife is an instructional aide at Horace Mann. Tell us how you met.

I'm a quarter Mexican. So growing up over the years in the family, I'd heard a lot of Spanish and it had always intrigued me, and I took some in high school. When I arrived in Los Angeles [from Chicago] I suddenly discovered it would be a tremendous asset to know Spanish fluently. So the first full summer I was here in 1998. I enrolled in a [community college] immersion program in Mexico, where you could go down there for a month and just completely immerse yourself in classes and live with a family and just get the 24-houra-day experience of just living the Spanish language in the Mexican culture.

The first weekend I was down there, I went to a party and I just happened to sit down next to my future wife. I knew just a very small amount of Spanish and my wife knew a very small amount of English, but we ended up having the best conversation we were able to have for three hours. So that was great. I let a couple days pass and I called her to see if she wanted to go out, and she said she had something else to do. So I waited another couple days and I called again and she said that day's not good. So I finally said, OK I'm going to call one more time, and if she says no, then that's it. So I called one more time and she said, Yeah, let's go out. And the rest is history.

Don't sell your life insurance know the

Alan L. Kaye, CLU, ChFC President

Most people over the age of 70, who want to sell their old insurance policies for more than their cash surrender value, are not getting the most money from their assets.

AVOID RISKS OF INSURANCE FINANCING STRATEGIES

Others, who expect to create "something from nothing", participate in insurance financing plans without having full knowledge of the chances they are taking. You can avoid these risks by becoming informed of established procedures and you won't make costly mistakes.

The Alan Kaye Insurance Agency is a leader in the field of insurance and estate planning. Now, as a wholly owned subsidiary of National Financial Partners, an NYSE company, they have expanded their resources to better provide the latest planning strategies. This is a particularly important resource when performing due-diligence on life insurance settlement companies.

THREE ESSENTIAL RULES THAT CAN PREVENT YOU FROM MAKING COSTLY DECISIONS

- Provide full and accurate descriptions of all offers relating to the sale of your policy.
- Acquire at least five offers from unrelated insurance purchasing companies.
- Complete background checks on potential purchasers to make sure they are financially and commercially acceptable firms to do business with.

ARE YOU COMPLETING A LIFE INSURANCE SETTLEMENT OR JUST SETTLING?

What kind of insurance professional is helping you sell your old life insurance policy? Are you dealing with a life settlement expert? Are you represented by a licensed professional with E&O Insurance that covers life settlements? Has your agent explained the risks involved in financing your life insurance?

Call us today to find out what your insurance is really worth and we will help you decide whether to sell, surrender, keep or replace your old insurance policy.
