Peace Corps

There is one thing the United States has done every day for the past 50 years that most Americans don't know about, don't hear about and will never be told about but we should all be proud of ... the Peace Corps.

Since 1961 over 200,000 Americans have volunteered to serve our nation in 139 foreign countries. The mission provides technical assistance, helping people outside the U.S. to understand U.S. culture and helping us to understand them and to promote world peace and friendship.

Woods introduced as superintendent; Board approves contract

Current San Marino Unified School District superintendent Gary W. Woods was introduced as BHUSD's new superintendent at the Board of Education meeting Tuesday night.

The Board approved a four-year contract, effective July 1, with an annual salary of $249,000. The Board also approved covering the Woods family's relocation expenses.

Woods, his wife Blanca and four children, ages 12 to 17, attended the meeting. The family is planning to move to Beverly Hills, and Woods' children will attend Beverly Hills schools as a team," Woods said. "We're in this together. I know I've got a great team around me and we're going to do some great things."

"I look at this thing

Board President Lisa Korbatov, Vice President Brian

Goldberg and Board member Jake Manaster talked about the exhaustive superintendent search the district went through with search firm Hazard, Young, Attea & Associates before hiring Woods. Woods was selected

"[The search was] time consuming but it was well worth it and we learned so much from the process," Korbatov said.

Manaster encouraged the community to embrace Woods as its superintendent.

"I want to thank my colleagues for that process and congratulate this community on attracting a really exceptional candidate," Manaster said.

SMUSD has led the state in Academic Performance Index scores for the past seven years.

Woods recognized outgoing superintendent Dick Douglas, and the audience responded with a standing ovation for Douglas.

Board member Steven Fenton commended Woods for recognizing Douglas, and Fenton reflected on asking Douglas to come back to BHUSD immediately after Douglas had retired from the superintendent post at Montecito Union School district, while BHUSD searched for a permanent superintendent.

"Everything we asked you have done and you have come through," Fenton said. "From the bottom of my heart, thank you for being here."

The $249,000 annual salary will give Woods a significant raise, as The Sacramento Bee reported that the SMUSD superintendent's salary was $180,000 in 2010.

The four-year contract provides for a 12-month salary buyout, should the Board decide to terminate the contract without cause. The Board would be required to give 30 days notice. Woods can cancel his con-

Retirements open up K-5 teaching positions for pink-slipped teachers

The Board of Education voted Tuesday night to fill six K-5 teaching positions that opened up due to 12 certificated employees' participation in the Supplemental Employee Retirement Plan, an early retirement incentive program that provides a monthly income in addition to regular retirement benefits. Qualified teachers currently on the layoff list will be reinstated to fill the positions.

Assistant Superintendent of Business Services Alex Cherniss explained that of the 12 positions that were vacated due to early retirement, the district must refill nine positions to meet contractual requirements and instructional needs.

The Board also voted to fill two science teaching vacancies out of four that opened up due to early retirement. The positions will be filled by new hires, because none of the teachers remaining on the layoff list are credentialed for those positions.

A new hire will also fill a moderate to severe special education teaching position. Two special education teachers remain on the layoff list, but they are not credentialed for moderate to severe special education.

The Board voted to increase the hours of a part-time instructional assistant from 19.5 to 29 hours, to compensate for the resignation of another part-time instructional assistant.

The Board decided to table approving the hiring of a health assistant at Horace Mann to evaluate other options.

Vice President Brian Goldberg suggested looking at a way that the remaining health assistants might be able to rotate throughout the district schools, rather than spending approximately $36,000 a year to refill the position.

Board member Myra Lurie suggested checking if any of the classified employees on the layoff list might be able to fill the position, since it does not require prior medical experience.

Filing period for Nov. 8 Board of Education election opens July 18

The filing period for Board of Education candidates to file declarations of candidacy and candidate statements with the county opens on July 18 and closes August 12. Three seats are open, and two incumbents have indicated they don't plan to run for reelection. For filing information call (562) 462-2748 or visit www.lavote.net.

Noise ordinance community meetings conclude

With the conclusion of the third community meeting about the City of Beverly Hills noise ordinance on May 24, it is now up to the Human Relations Commission to draft an ordinance to present to the Beverly Hills City Council for consideration.

"I think it is very clear this is a challenging topic and the commission is well aware of that as well," Human Relations Commission Chair Sharona Nazarian said. "We're going to be very mindful in making our recommendation."

Nazarian said over 50 people attended the May 24 meeting, and expressed a range of views about the City's noise ordinance, which limits the use or operation of sound amplifying equipment to the hours between 10 a.m. and 6 p.m. daily. The ordinance also presents guidelines for maximum permis-

According to Lt. Joseph Chirillo, the Beverly Hills Police Department received 439 complaints about loud music or parties between Jan. 28 and June 30, 2009, and 793 complaints between June 1 and Dec. 31, 2010.

Nazarian said that residents expressed opinions in person, by phone and by letter. Individuals expressed opinions including the desire to keep the current ordinance, to extend the hours up to the early hours of the morning, and to further limit the hours that amplified sound is allowed.

Former Mayor Chuck Aronberg, who is an ophthalmologist, brought up the topic of noise as a public health issue during the public comment section of the meeting.

"Noise harms people's health and causes high blood pressure and heart disease, endocrine problems and gastrointestinal disorders, hearing loss and decreased longevity," Aronberg said on Thursday. "Also, it causes loss of sleep and poor concentration and reduces children's ability to learn."

Aronberg said he hoped that the Human Relations Commission would not weaken, and if anything would strengthen the existing noise ordinance.

According to Mayor Barry Brucker, who attended the meeting, police enforcement of the noise ordinance is currently beginning at 10 p.m.

For that reason, former Board of Education member Mel Spitz said at the May 9 meeting that he thought it would be reasonable for the noise ordinance to be extended to 10 p.m.

"From 6 p.m. to 10 p.m. I thought would be reasonable because that's the way the police are currently enforcing it," Spitz said. "In effect it would make no change in terms of maintaining the quiet enjoyment of our homes."

After the meeting, Brucker pointed out that the police have the discretion to cite individuals at any time for disturbing the peace.

"What that means is, if it's 4 p.m. and someone's music is so loud and obnoxious that neighbors' windows are vibrating uncontrollably, that's disturbing the peace," Brucker said. "That's one remedy police have the ability to enforce 24/7."

Nazarian said the next step is for the Human Relations Commission and City Council liaison to meet, and then the Human Relations Commission will come up with a recommendation for the City Council.

The Weekly reunites Beverly High grad with lost diploma

More than 40 years after Gertrude Anne Fox's high school graduation, Fox's lost 1969 diploma was returned to her daughter, Natasha Pietrantonio of Sherman Oaks, at the Board of Education meeting on Tuesday night (see photo page 2).

In 2005, the Weekly published a cover story, "Lost Treasures" in Issue #289, which discussed a diploma the Weekly purchased on eBay and attempted to track down the owner, 1969 Beverly High graduate Gertrude Anne Fox. The Weekly was unable to locate Fox at the time. In March, the Weekly finally reached Fox, who now goes by Anne Reynolds. Reynolds, now retired and living in Big Bear, said she had assumed her diploma was packed away in storage, but she believes it may have gotten mixed up in her adopted father's collection of books, photographs and movie memorabilia, which he likely sold before moving to Hawaii following a divorce.

The diploma ended up at Cosmopolitan Book Shop on Melrose Avenue, where it sat for many years. When the owner of Cosmopolitan sold the shop's inventory, the diploma made its way to Rivalbooks.com in Hailey, Idaho, through which the Weekly

Beverly High senior tops 40,000 students in ROP competition

Beverly High senior Jacob Nierob topped a field of 40,000 students to win the gold medal and superintendent's award at the Los Angeles County Regional Occupational Program Outstanding Student Recognition Competition, which took place on March 22

Nierob received the two awards at two ceremonies in May, and on Tuesday night the BHUSD Board of Education recognized Nierob for his accomplishments. In the competition, students were judged on a five-minute work product presentation and a 10-minute simulated employment interview.

Δ'

Students were also required to complete a job application, résumé and personal statement.

"[The awards have] given me confidence in knowing that people can recognize my good work and it gives me confidence to see that I could possibly do something in this field some day," Nierob said.

Nierob presented a sports marketing project in which he designed a stadium, tickets and uniforms and developed promotional and marketing ideas for a fantasy football team, which he decided to base in Los Angeles, since the city does not have an NFL team.

Nierob's opportunity to compete came from a project he started in ROP instructor Steve Rappaport's sports marketing class. Rappaport nominated Nierob for the school competition, which he won, qualifying him for the county level competition.

"I was privileged enough to write the curriculum for high schools in sports marketing in California, and so for me it's a particular honor to have my student win this kind of award," Rappaport said. "It makes it all worthwhile."

Nierob, a varsity baseball player, said he enjoyed the project because of his interest in sports management.

"I've always loved sports my entire life," Nierob said. "I started realizing after a while, well maybe I'm not going to be able to play sports at the Division I level, but I can still be involved in sports through sports management, because that's how you build a team."

In the fall, Nierob will attend University of Michigan at Ann Arbor on an academic merit scholarship. He plans to pursue the sports management program.

Beverly High graduate Penny Davidi among Food Network Star hopefuls

If you tell 1989 Beverly High graduate Penny Davidi no, don't expect her to listen.

Pennv Davidi

"When someone says no, [something's] not possible for me, that makes me want to go and do it more," Davidi said.

That mindset inspired Davidi to try out for Food Network Star, which premieres June 5.

Davidi is one of 15 chefs that will compete for the opportunity to have her own cooking show on the Food Network. According to Davidi, she will be the first Middle Easterner featured on the network.

Davidi had been working with manager Debbie Supnik who was sending her out to casting calls for shows including the last season of The Apprentice. Davidi made it into the top 50 contestants.

"When I did that she said alright, you've got what it takes and I'll sign you," Davidi said. Despite the potential Supnik saw in Davidi, she wanted Davidi to be patient and suggested she hold off on applying for Food Network Star.

"I applied anyway and went from the first casting to the next to the next," Davidi said. When Davidi was sequestered for secrecy, Davidi told Supnik that she had gone to cook at a Kibbutz in Israel. Davidi said Supnik was blown away when she found out the truth.

Davidi opened the successful Pizza Rustica in Beverly Hills. Following a 2003 trip to Miami, where Davidi experienced Pizza Rustica for the first time, she was inspired to bring the restaurant to Beverly Drive. She told her parents she no longer wanted to practice oriental medicine.

"I said to my parents, you know what, I'm a divorced independent woman and I want change in my life. I want to open up pizzerias," Davidi said. "My poor father said, I sent you to school to become a doctor. What do you know about running pizzerias?"

Although Davidi had no formal culinary training—she learned how to cook from her mother, grandmother and sisters—Davidi proved she was very capable. In partnership with her best friend Lorena Mendoza Toub, they opened a successful restaurant on Beverly Drive, which became a celebrity hotspot.

"We would have to sneak [celebrity Britney Spears] out the back," Davidi said. "People stood in line for 20 minutes for a slice of pizza. Then we opened up another location and started franchising them all over Southern California."

In 2008, Toub, who married actor Shaun Toub, decided she wanted to start a family, so they sold the business.

Davidi went into management development, where she came up with office solutions for executive suites. She was COO for the firm Land of the Free when she decided to go after her dream—to have her own cooking show on the Food Network.

In the meantime, Davidi had been teaching friends about staples to keep in their pantries and how to cook simple, interesting dishes at home.

"I was taking ethnic spices and ethnic dishes and incorporating them into completely American meals," Davidi said. "I would make spaghetti and meatballs but would make it more ethnic. In the sauce, I would put saffron. It was different, a lot of experimenting, falling in love with food and people. Americans get excited if they can make Middle Eastern crusty rice, tahdig rice. I fell in love with that, the feeling that people got from being able to create something and it was my doing."

Davidi said it was her consulting experiences that gave her the idea to pursue having her own cooking show and write a cookbook of American recipes with an ethnic twist.

"I made it fun and sassy and easy, as a home cook would be able to create it, and it turned out to be a series of great recipes, but also great stories that led up to these recipes," Davidi said.

Davidi mentioned her aspiration to have a show on Food Network to a friend, who connected her with Supnik.

Davidi said she feels blessed and empowered to have the opportunity to appear on Food Network Star.

"First of all, I learned so much about what I am capable of as a human being," Davidi said. "It was such an amazing experience for personal growth and to really push the limits. I felt as someone who did not go to culinary school, being a mom and a single mom at that, and having been divorced for almost nine years and really having such a struggle to make it, and having my children look up to me, my family look up to me, the fact that I did this, it was so empowering as a woman, as an ethnic woman, and as a single mother."

Commissioner retires after 19 years of service

During a 19year career on City commissions, recently retired commissioner Gary Gilbar served on the Architectural and Planning commissions and most recently on the Design Review Commission.

Gilbar, an architect and one of the original members of the Design Review Commission, was recognized by the City Council on May 24 for his years of service as a City commissioner.

"We are so grateful for all the time and effort and your very balanced approach to working with community members trying to build their projects and get them done looking efficient and in a style we would all be proud of," Mayor Barry Brucker said.

All three commissions on which Gilbar served are mandated to have an architect, and Gilbar said working with fellow architect Hamid Gabbay on the Design Review briefs cont. on page 9

City agrees: Hayman is a legend

And city managers past and present By Rudy Cole

Fred Hayman turns down more honors than most of us ever receive. All kinds of charities and worthwhile groups want to give him a luncheon or dinner, unlike the routine by Red Buttons, about people "who never had a dinner," Hayman could probably have one every night of the week.

So, for both the community and Hayman, last Tuesday was something quite extraordinary. Hayman was given a luncheon by the Rodeo Drive Committee and the City of Beverly Hills recognizing his being named the 15th Walk of Style honoree with a plaque installed on the street he helped create.

Held at Two Rodeo, the ceremony did capture Hayman's very special contributions in creating our now world famous little street. His unique and very chic Giorgio's and later with "Fred Hayman's" he helped set the standards for, and converted a sleepy little street of mixed small convenience stores, a few restaurants and low rent office buildings, and only a few clothing stores, into the world class, most famous shopping street in the world, Fifth Avenue for Beverly Hills.

At the reception, before an audience of city leaders and also style setters, Hayman was, as always, brief but on target. He thanked the organizers of the event and the city and also put it all in historical perspective: Rodeo Drive helped change our image.

Lauding Hayman in introductory remarks were Mayor Barry Brucker, Rodeo Drive Committee chair Tom Blumenthal, Walk of Style Chair Perri Ellen Berne – director of Bottega Veneta, Wanda McDaniel, committee selection chair and executive VP for communications for Giorgio Armani, Rose Apodaca, former west coast editor of Women's Wear Daily and author of an upcoming biography of Hayman titled "Fred Hayman – The Extraordinary Difference," and Gil Cates, producing director of the contributions in helping make that possible. The list of those attending, all major leaders in fashion, the arts, government and business was one of the most impressive we've seen in our village. At the risk of omitting most, a few we spotted. City National Bank chair Bram Goldsmith, the head of the Annenberg board; Lou Moore, Annenberg exec director, long time Hayman attorney and friend, Leo Ziffren, auto legend Lee Iacocca, a quorum of former mayors Donna Ellman, Mark Egerman, Allan Alexander, Linda Briskman, Vicki Reynolds and all current members:

Vice Mayor Dr. Willie Brien, John Mirisch, Dr. Julian Gold and Lili Bosse.

The legendary Fiorenza Courtright, widow of the man she helped reinvent the Beverly Wilshire, Hernando, now married to retired state supreme court Justice Malcolm Lucas, former managing director of the Montage Beverly Hills Ali Kasikci, Marcia Hobbs, Chief of Police David Snowden, City Manager Jeff Kolin and, of course, the never ruffled, always charming wife Betty Hayman, and many other names I should have remembered and mentioned, but every seat was taken.

A special nod to the Donahue Group – they give great events.

And speaking of events, tonight you can still show up at the Academy for the Maple Counseling Center annual movie premiere and car drawing, UCLA Hillel has a tribute to Persian women (call or email me for more info), and later this month, on June 18, the annual Beverly Hills Athletic Alumni Association's all day sports event at the high school. CITY MANAGERS, PAST AND PRESENT

Considering our highly volatile, often emotionally divided community we have had considerable success in the hiring of really outstanding city managers. (True, considering the real problems facing the world, our minor squabbles should always be put in proper perspective.)

With one notable exception, the brief and troubled tenure of a former city manager from Skokie, Illinois, John N. Matzer, Jr., in the past few decades our top professionals have been both intellectually and professionally of star quality.

What makes this even more impressive is how different in style, temperament and experience the denizens of the fourth floor have been.

In our most recent years the city managers have been Ed Kreins, Mark Scott, Rod Wood and now Jeff Kolin. Wood and Kolin came directly from other cities, Scott had considerable experience in many Beverly Hills city departments, being groomed for the city manager's position, but leaving for a job in a northern Los Angeles County community, only to be recruited back when Maxwell H. Salter was mayor.

Kreins, who was Beverly Hills Police Chief before being appointed, had extensive city management and law enforcement work in a northern California small city. He quickly restored order following the exit of the guy from Skokie. He kept the lines of responsibility between the city manager and the city council very clear, and brooked no invasion of his or his department's control and duties. The city needed exactly that kind of leadership following the Skokie experiment.

In fact, Kreins mentored Scott, promoting him to high ranking positions and moving him to different departments so that he would have broader experience in the workings of planning, traffic and public works – departments Kreins viewed as an apprenticeship for the city manager's position.

Kreins, now a consultant for cities seeking city managers or in need of interim leadership, was by far the most insistent on keeping lines of authority very clear.

Scott, although he somewhat kept his distance, both physically and emotionally, continuing to make his home in Glendale, he was very much tuned into the social and political consciousness of our city. Not in any activist or intrusive manner, but Scott was politically liberal, socially conscious and intellectually comfortable with our community.

This did not stop him from totally supporting our police when the city faced allegations of racial profiling. This community too rallied behind our cops, impressive since civil liberties and civil rights are part of our core beliefs, and Scott shared those values.

Typical of Scott was something I witnessed by accident. To support the police, Scott wanted to prove that people of color were never harassed or singled out in any manner by law enforcement. Early one Sunday morning I found Scott with some note pads in the small parking space north of city hall counting the number of cars with African American drivers traveling through our city, and not being stopped. No, he didn't delegate this to some lower level city employee or police department staffer, he was doing it himself, on a day off.

Actually, the stats on the large numbers of minority people who come to our city each day to work in our stores, offices, schools and at city hall, many at management positions, would have been worth chronicling, but Scott went to the direct impact of driving to satisfy both his own conclusions and to determine if that would help defend the city in the then-civil lawsuits.

Scott was legendary for his hands-on direction of every agency and department, and mostly this was beneficial to our city government. What he also shared with Kreins was a fierce loyalty to the city staff, not just department heads. Any criticism of personnel, he took personally.

When Wood succeeded Scott, there were some inevitable changes. Wood combined departments into divisions, promoted, largely from within, and gave greater responsibility to the leaders in each division. Scott was intimately aware of how each department was being managed, Wood wanted his team to take more responsibility and come to him with problems and solutions, not daily direction. Both methods of management, and though they were obviously different, worked at the time.

Wood lived here, became involved socially in the community and developed strong, personal relationships with members of the city council. It is part of the culture of the job to adopt to the programs and priorities of first the mayor and then the whole city council, and Wood did that very well. Where Scott kept in close communication with the often virulent, anti-council activists, Wood did something that surprised almost everyone on our most volatile challenge: taking a position on some development matter.

When approval of the Montage Beverly Hills debate was raging, later to become a hot ballot measure, Wood delivered one of the most compelling arguments in favor of the project at a public meeting of the city council. Rational, carefully researched and emotion free, Wood carefully catalogued all the best arguments in favor of approval that had yet been made, including those of the project's many representatives.

How effective was Wood? The anti-Montage community leaders, many very able and talented, stormed out of the council meeting, refusing even to attempt an immediate answer. Not only did this give the council some breathing room, it was a major asset during the ballot debate.

Clearly, Wood was an intellectual star. I once heard him explain the impacts of vertical compared to horizontal growth at a meeting of the government affairs committee of the Chamber that was really incisive and understandable. Here he was giving stats on the impact of the loss of farm land to housing in the Central Valley – explaining how risky it was to diminish food supply – in our urban setting, and making all of us take notice.

Considering the very different personalities and strengths, it was surprising to some in city government, that it was Scott who was more likely to insist on the power of the city manager's office not being diminished by the city council. On the one hand, here was Scott being very open to city critics, making himself available and returning calls, while Wood was less tolerant of council opponents.

Scott was almost never criticized by any of the city's warring factions, Wood often became their target.

Enters Jeff Kolin. First, in terms of reputations, Kolin, Wood, Scott and Kreins all had high approval ratings from their peers. However, Kolin and Wood became or are top leaders in their professional, city manager associations. All four are brilliant professionals, in both management and conceptual talents.

Kolin had a hard act to follow – inheriting a highly functional city staff with some star performers in most divisions. However, although Wood could be both charming and even amusing, meetings mostly turned into lectures. Kolin is more a student, but also a quick learner. I was amazed, following an early, brief meeting, how well he understood the major players in the city's political process, carefully avoiding premature judgments. Kolin probably rolls better with criticism, but that is not to be misunderstood – he can be firm and independent. Hard to make changes when the process is working, but Kolin will, slowly but inexorably, bring his own vision of leadership to his staff, some of whom want even more direction from him.

Hard to determine, but Kolin may be more hard skinned than any of his three predecessors, none of whom took criticism calmly. In his last job, he acted firmly and promptly when a police official acted in a discriminatory manner to a female worker.

One of the key tests of an effective city manager is carefully monitoring and controlling the actions of his or her employers: the mayor and city council. It is natural for those elected instead of being appointed to authority, to want to make things happen and to become very directly involved in management. When that turns into an invasion of the job of the city manager or department head, it detracts from the clearly defined city manager form of government. Kolin inherited a process where that was already being tested.

Difficult to lead in a city with 32,000 generals and only a few privates. But we have a long tradition of governmental integrity and professional skills, and excellent relationships with the community by those who work at city hall. There is indeed a feeling of respect and trust for police and fire – the most visible city workers, and for every agency within the city. It is too strong to be seriously impaired by some intolerant outbursts by those not able to make some private war a city battle, and whatever Kolin may be, he is not easy to panic – calm and almost stoic in behavior.

We are indeed fortunate to have had so many great city managers, including our most recent four. Although different in style, temperament and backgrounds, they have helped make our city the envy of municipal management throughout the state and the nation.

A former mayor put it very well. While saying goodbye to the departing Rod Wood, he said: "We have been fortunate to have had the services of the best city manager in the nation. Now we welcome our new city manager, Jeff Kolin, also the best city manager anywhere."

Scott is now city manager of Fresno, a job he has long wanted, but still watches what happens here. Wood is semi-retired, doing consulting in various areas of municipal government, but living in the Palm Desert area. Kreins' son Ed Junior, is a high ranking and respected police officer.

A computer glitch derailed a final installment of Best of Beverly Hills, but a 14year-old whiz will probably understand my electronic age deficiencies and restore in time for next issue. Same for other promised features.

Tell us about the Sister City Student Film Showcase.

I was speaking with the president of Beverly Hills Global Partners [and Design Review Commission Chair], Howard Szabo, and we were thinking that we wanted to have a student film portion for The Maple Counseling Center event. We decided to have something that would celebrate diversity [so the theme of] the films [was] "A Day in the Life of ... " This way people would be able to create four- to six-minute documentary films about themselves [or] somebody they admired.

How were the student films selected?

We had three judges in Herzliya, we had three judges in Cannes, and we had a very careful selection process for it. They are all uploaded on YouTube for anyone to view [www.youtube.com/user/ BHGlobalPartners]. We had each sister city select their top film to be screened the night of the event, and for Beverly Hills we also had producer Dean Zanuck as a judge. He's our honorary chair of the event. I am chairing the event, along with [Rodeo Drive Committee President] Tom Blumenthal and Howard Szabo.

Tell us about the student films.

What I can tell you is they are all really exciting and it's so interesting to see how different all of the various cultures are and how similar we all are. The student filmmakers [including one from Beverly High] are psychology and I applied and I became an intern for The Maple Counseling Center. It was a very rewarding experience because I got to see firsthand the amazing work the Center does to help our community. I was doing individual counseling, couples and family treatment, and I was running several groups. The target population is not only for the City of Beverly Hills, [the Center] helps all the local surrounding cities as well. It's providing affordable mental health care on a sliding scale.

Why is it important that The Maple Counseling Center provides low-fee counseling services in Beverly Hills?

I think in these trying economic times, it's really important for people to have an outlet and have a place where they can get proper treatment. We have so many different groups as well as individual, couples and family treatment to help people to heal in whatever stage of life they're at and whatever struggles that come up. I want to mention one other thing about The Maple Counseling Center. Right now, it needs all the support the community can give. [The Center was] in a bit of a tough bind, but luckily [it has] completely pulled out of it. Under the leadership of CEO Marcy Kaplan and our president Dr. Mason Sommers our organization has really thrived in moving forward this year.

What made you want to apply to the Human Relations Commission?

I love the City of Beverly Hills. I think we're really fortunate to live here. I wanted to be able to give back to my community, and being that I'm in the field of psychology, I thought it would be a nice fit.

How does your background as a psychologist help you on the Human Relations Commission?

I feel that living in Beverly Hills, we have such a diverse community that oftentimes it is

What was the impetus for the civility statement?

I think it's something that people are embracing nationwide. It's not just a local issue, it's [something] that we've seen in politics and sports, and it's only becoming that Beverly Hills supports a civility statement because we are leaders in so many other aspects of community life, and in order to be a positive role model for our city.

Can you update the community on the noise ordinance and what will happen now that the three community meetings have taken place?

Currently we are going to be meeting with our [city] council liaisons and from that point we are going to deliberate with the commission with all of the information we have obtained from the community at large. That includes letters, people who came to the meetings, as well as people who called in on the days of the meetings to create a recommendation to submit to the [city] council.

Why has this topic come up now?

The ordinance is currently over 50 years old and the city council was looking it over and the council instructed the Human Relations Commission. They directed [us] to listen to public comments and come back with further recommendations to update this ordinance.

What was the range of opinions you heard?

We've heard a very wide range, anything from [wanting to] keep the party going all night to having absolutely no noise from 5 p.m. I feel that although some differences of opinion exist, our community is eager to come to a helpful that I have my specialty in multicultural psychology.

What are the priorities of the Human Relations Commission this year?

The civility statement is a very important aspect of our commission and I think that could tie into the field of psychology, and trying to understand one another. We did a Persian Roundtable for our commission as well. Initially, the roundtable was designed at my suggestion to better understand the similarities that exist within our community around various cultures. The first one that we did was the Persian Roundtable, because the demographics of Beverly Hills are changing and while we all get along very well for the most part, I would love to assist in bridging the slight differences that exist.

Those are the types of things the commission does that show we have a lot more similarities among our cultures than differences. It's really important to realize that at times, and to realize that even when there are differences, it's just understanding what it is and from there we're able to respect and understand each other a

What is the civility statement?

The Human Relations Commission promotes positive human relations in all aspects of community life. At this point we are inviting every member of this community to support an environment where civility, respect and responsible actions prevail.

mutually beneficial agreement and we at the Human Relations Commission are happy to assist in fostering that and coming to some positive recommendations for our community. Everybody wants to be good neighbors, all want to enjoy their homes, and people do want to come together. It's been great to see the interest and support from the community because people care about the community in Beverly Hills.

How can Beverly Hills residents promote civility?

The best way to promote it is to get to know your neighbors. Invite them over for a cup of coffee or something. Talk to each other.

Commission helped raised the quality of applications the commission reviewed. On the Planning Commission, Gilbar put his Master's degree in planning to use.

"I've taught at the university level and sometimes it was like that, because you needed to explain to the applicants—whatever the commission is—your reasoning," Gilbar said last Friday. "Some of it had to be about what is good design and what isn't, which is a highly subjective thing."

The late former Mayor Max Salter interviewed Gilbar for the Architectural Commission 19 years ago. Gilbar said he found his experiences on the commissions interesting and challenging.

"I always try to learn something new every day," Gilbar said. "Being a commissioner, it was intellectually challenging. Beverly Hills is a small enough city, if you get involved with a commission, you can have some impact."

Gilbar expressed gratitude for the opportunity, and also acknowledged the support he received from City staff.

"Sometimes you can't satisfy everybody, but you try as a professional to look longterm," Gilbar said. "Beverly Hills has been here for a long time and will be here for a long time. When someone builds a house in the city, that house will be there long after they leave. A house or a store is an asset to the community and therefore the community needs to ask them to do something which is compatible with the community because it will affect all of us that live in the city."

For the past several months, Gilbar extended his service while a replacement, required to be an architect, was found. Architect John Wyka was formally appointed to the Design Review Commission at the city council meeting on May 17.

Sunset Boulevard public outreach meeting on June 6

The City of Beverly Hills is seeking community input and will present information about three uncontrolled intersections on Sunset Boulevard during a public outreach meeting on June 6 in the Beverly Hills Library Auditorium at 6 p.m.

The City's objective is to improve traffic circulation on Sunset at the North Camden, Bedford and Roxbury drive intersections. Approximately 44,000 vehicles travel along Sunset Boulevard each day.

Something that we did that was really cool, we had a map that we took to the famers' market, Roxbury Park, various areas of the city. The City has allocated over $1.4 million from the infrastructure fund for fiscal year 2011-12 for construction of the improvements, as well as for the replacement 600 LED bulbs and citywide signal upgrades. More than $2.8 million was allocated for the projects last year.

Staff will present a range of possible options, including sign and striping improvements, median modifications or closures, installing traffic signals or a combination of items. These options will be evaluated based on traffic diversion, safety, public input, costs, intersection level of service and environmental impacts.

Additional public outreach meetings will be scheduled for the summer and fall. Following the meetings, the staff and the Traffic & Parking Commission will submit recommendations to the City Council.

BHHS Runner Wins Southern Section Race

Beverly High senior Sydney Gray won the girls' 800 meter run at the Southern Section Division 2 Track and Field Finals May 21 at Cerritos College, the first time since 1998 a Norman athlete has won a Southern Section track championship.

Gray entered the race as the No. 1 seed for having the fastest time in the prelims May 14, but was sixth after the first lap.

"With 250 meters to go, I started moving up, up," Gray said.

Gray said that with 80 meters to go, she pulled even with the leader, Newbury Park senior Megan Thompson.

"It was her and me for 60 meters, then the last [20] I just got it," Gray said.

Gray was timed in two minutes, 13.51 seconds, .54 ahead of Thompson who finished second. Beverly Hills junior Brianna Simmons was seventh in 2:18.83.

Gray called the victory "incredible."

"I've worked so hard for four years and I never imagined myself getting a CIF championship," said Gray, who will attend George Washington University, where she plans to compete on its cross country team. on 18 years of marriage, I have three boys that I'm very proud of, Noah (11), Aaron (9), and Jonah (6). They're the top priority in my life. At this time, we have our children at Sinai Akiba Academy, which is a perfect fit for this stage of our lives. We are hopeful to send our children to BHUSD as they get older.

We enjoy traveling with our children to give them the gift of learning about other cultures and experiencing other environments, and we hope this will foster a more open-minded outlook for them in their future. My family loves music, all of our children play multiple instruments and sing, and we encourage them to play all kinds of sports, including AYSO soccer, BHBL, BHLL, skiing and swimming. I had the privilege of coaching my son's BHBL team and it was a blast. The most important things in my life at this moment are my family, my community and my faith.

Do you have any interest in running for local office in the future?

No. My children are way too young to even be thinking about something like that right now. If I do anything I want to do it 100 percent. If I can't do it wholeheartedly I won't even touch it.

BHFD welcomes Hawthorne first graders

Hawthorne teacher Stephanie Lehrer's first grade class visited the Beverly Hills Fire Station for a tour on May 19. The students had the opportunity to sit in fire vehicles and meet Beverly Hills firefighters. Lehrer has taken her class to the fire station for field trips for over 25 years.

Gray credited the victory to Norman coach Jeff Fisher.

Fisher "turned the whole team around," when he became coach two years ago, Gray said.

"All the attitudes changed," Fisher said. "Being around people with the same attitude as me really helped me."

To Fisher, Gray won the race "in September (and) October," when she was unable to run either in training or in meets with the cross country team because of a benign tumor on her left leg, but "found every way to stay in shape."

"All her hard work and dedication put her in the position to win that race," Fisher said.

Gray would swim in the mornings and ride a stationary bicycle in the afternoons when she was unable to run.

This was the 15th time a Beverly Hills athlete, and seventh time a Norman female athlete, has won an individual event at the Southern Section Track and Field Finals.

Before Gray, Randi Smith was the most recent Norman athlete to win a Southern Section track and field title, winning both the girls' 100 high hurdles and 300 low hurdles in 1998 for the second consecutive year.

Gray qualified for the CIF State Championships with a ninth-place finish in Friday's Southern Section Masters Meet at Cerritos College in a personal-best time of 2:12.49.

The State Championships begin Friday at Buchanan High School in Clovis.

Beverly Hills' other individual competitor at the Southern Section Division 2 Finals, sophomore Alex Rohani was third in the boys' 400 in 48.94, behind Whittier La Serna teammates Andres Vega, who won in 48.40, and German Fabela, second in 48.72.

The Norman boys' 1,600 relay team of Cameron Countryman, Mario Conti, Chanan Batra and Rohani was seventh in 3:23.06 in a race won by Indio in 3:17.05.

The Beverly Hills girls' 1,600 relay team of Gray, Vanessa Torres, Lily Ting and Simmons was eighth in 4:01.61. Santa Ana Mater Dei won in 3:50.22.

What? New Tax Laws Again?

Ask for our complimentary, concise, easy to understand summary of federal estate tax changes.

Call about your insurance needs 310.277.9400

Tax Change Checklist: What about my life insurance?

New tax laws are on the books. And they pose a challenge to seniors and anyone who already owns at least $500,000 in life insurance.

Is this you? Ask yourself:

- Do I still need or want the life insurance I bought before the laws changed?
- If not, is there a smart way to sell it for more than its cash surrender value?
- Is my existing coverage still the best way to accomplish my estate planning goals?

Opportunity is knocking. Let it in!

New tax laws are creating opportunities and new uses for life insurance! Like the "gift windfall" letting you pass millions more to your loved ones. Couples now can gift up to $8 million more than last year – without gift taxes!

And life insurance can help you legally leverage – in effect, multiply – that amount much higher in many ways. Our creative planning can allow you to use new gifting opportunities to help pay future insurance premiums and get the most out of trusts and other financial agreements critical to your family's security

Isn't that what life insurance should be all about...security? Take action before the laws change again!

Big new breaks are out there waiting for you. Some are even retroactive to January 2010. Lawmakers had you in mind when they updated the tax code.

TAKE ADVANTAGE!

Consult your professional financial, tax and legal counsel. Then... Call Alan Kaye at 310.277.9400 about your life insurance needs
