"Neighbors voice numerous concerns about Lexus Project's potential impacts" [Issue #637]

I attended the [Dec. 12 community] meeting on the Lexus dealership project and did not hear any residents in favor of the project. Everyone who lives on South Maple, including myself, is totally opposed to it. I asked a question at the meeting to which I did not get an answer-with the past nuisances posed by the existing Lexus dealership as is, has anyone on the management team there ever been disciplined or fired? How can we expect different results if the same management team is in place at the dealership? Why has the dealership been such a poor neighbor to date? They have not respected their neighbors over the years by unloading cars and idling trucks in the alley, having cars double park and idling on both sides of the street, etc. and blocking traffic. I have very little confidence an expansion of the dealership with zoning conditions will

On the cover

Senior sous chef Giuliano Mosca Photo: Eric Marshall help matters. Code enforcement has limited capacity and has to station officers to see violations in action. They are stretched thin as it is and fines for a large dealership like the one being proposed would not have much effect, they would simply be a cost to doing business.

I heard a statement at the meeting that up to 20 percent of cars pulling out of the Lexus dealership would be expected to go around the barrier they are proposing to prohibit cars from turning right out of the dealership onto South Maple towards Olympic. To move forward on this project with a 20-percent expected deviation around the traffic barrier would be foolish and dangerous. Also, it is likely, cars will try to pull out, get stuck in the middle of the street and then simply block traffic thereby creating an incentive to make an illegal turn or causing an accident. None of the residents are in favor of the Lexus dealership's massive expansion. The massive expansion of the Lexus dealership coupled with the possibility of a subway running underneath homes on the south side of Beverly Hills is almost too much for the residents here to take.

I read both the quote from the [immediate past] chair of the Traffic & Parking Commission, Jeff Levine, wherein he says that he believes that the meetings would run more efficiently with fewer members and Rudy Cole's comment [in his column] that the more commission members the more opportunities for involvement in City government

To say less commissioners will mean the commission will run more efficiently presupposes the commission is not running efficiently at the present time. If the meetings are not efficiently run, I have not noticed it.

Taking myself out of the equation as a part chair of the Traffic & Parking Commission for fear of being accused of patting myself on the back, as I approach the end of six years on the Traffic & Parking Commission every chair, including Jeff Levine, I have had the privilege of serving under has run a tight ship with the most collegial professionals I've had a chance to work with. The meetings have been run without personal attacks or agendas.

City Council approves Lexus Project, despite neighbors' concerns

At the end of a public hearing Monday night that lasted more than five hours, the City Council came to a unanimous 5-0 decision to allow the construction of a new Jim Falk Lexus dealership at 9230 Wilshire Boulevard and approve a conditional use permit (CUP).

The Planning Commission voted Oct. 27 to approve the CUP and recommend the project to the City Council. On behalf of the owners of the apartment building at 131 South Maple and the office building at 9230 Wilshire, former Mayor and attorney Steve Webb filed an appeal of the CUP because of potential detrimental impacts to the neighborhood. Dozens of residents attended the meeting to express concerns about the project.

The proposed dealership is 45 feet tall, with four levels above ground, and two subterranean levels with 68 service bays. The project proposes 351 on-site parking spaces, plus leasing 100 spaces for employee parking off site. To divert dealership traffic away from residential areas, a barrier will be installed on South Maple Drive restricting turns in and out of the dealership, and a traffic light will be installed at South Maple Drive and Wilshire Boulevard.

The traffic light was a point of concern for many residents, who worried it would cause a backup on South Maple Drive that would discourage dealership customers from making the prescribed left turn out of the dealership toward Wilshire and instead encourage them to make an illegal right into residential South Maple Drive.

All five councilmembers expressed interest in a possible solution proposed by South Maple Drive resident Manuel Bergher, who suggested installing bollards across South Maple Drive south of the east-west alley to separate dealership operations from the residential area. After business hours, the bollards could be lowered allowing traffic to flow in both directions. Bergher presented a petition signed by 130 Palm and Maple Drive residents in support of the idea.

"It would inconvenience us too, but we'd be willing to do that," Bergher said.

Although the City Council approved the project without bollards, the City Council requested staff study the feasibility and implications of installing the devices either north or south of the alley. Councilmember John Mirisch said if the bollards were placed south of the alley, drivers headed north on Maple Drive would have trouble turning around on the narrow street. Associate Planner Ryan Gohlich said installing bollards would likely result in a significant traffic impact elsewhere, and Fire Battalion Chief Michael Newell said bollards could present safety issues, since they could slow down emergency vehicles traveling in the area.

The City Council agreed on several conditions in addition to the 107 imposed by the CUP, including delaying the opening of the service department on Saturdays until 9 a.m. instead of 7 a.m.; extending notice of construction at the dealership beyond the 300-foot-radius required by code to reach additional residents who could be affected by the project; establishing a 24-hour hotline staffed by a Lexus employee to respond to residents during construction and dealership operations; requiring Lexus to provide a traffic monitor during service hours for the first six months of operation; requiring mechanics to display a sign indicating their affiliation with the dealership while test driving vehicles that are being serviced; requiring Lexus to establish a "code enforcement escrow fund" to cover City costs associated with enforcing conditions in and around the dealership; and requiring a review of the CUP by the Planning Commission after one year of operation.

The City Council also approved certification of the project's final environmental impact report (EIR), relocation of an alley, a loading zone on Wilshire Boulevard, and a zone text amendment allowing certain parking and service areas to be excluded from total floor areas.

"I'm quite pleased with the outcome and I'm very proud of this council for really understanding not only the needs of the neighborhood, but also the balance between a strong business opportunity and its compatibility with quality of life for the residents," Mayor Barry Brucker said Tuesday. "I think that the council put substantial conditions on the property with the hopes that the traffic from Lexus will be directed away from the residential community, and thus keeping the neighborhood as tranquil as possible."

In her remarks Monday night, Councilmember Lili Bosse also talked about striking a balance.

"Lexus is a significant partner in our community in terms of revenue," Bosse said. "It's about a balance and it's about quality of life for the residents. Part of what enables quality of life for our residents is being able to have revenue for the police, the fire, the schools."

Bosse also pointed out the dealership predates the requirement of operating under a CUP, which has resulted in many complaints from residents over the years. Bosse proposed several of the additional conditions the council approved.

"Lexus has been there now for 20 years," Bosse said. "As long as we don't have any conditions, the quality of life is not going to improve. I have to say to you from my per-

SUMMARY NOTICE

NOTICE OF ADOPTION OF ORDINANCE 11-O-2616 OF THE CITY COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF BEVERLY HILLS AMENDING THE BEVERLY HILLS MUNICIPAL CODE TO ADOPT A VIEW RESTORATION PROGRAM FOR THE TROUSDALE ESTATES AREA OF THE CITY

PLEASE TAKE NOTICE that on December 6, 2011, the City Council of the City of Beverly Hills adopted an ordinance entitled "Ordinance of the City of Beverly Hills Amending the Beverly Hills Municipal Code to Adopt a View Restoration Program for the Trousdale Estates Area of the City." Mayor Brucker, Vice Mayor Brien and Councilmembers Mirisch, Bosse and Gold voted for adoption of the ordinance. A summary of that Ordinance follows:

Summary of Ordinance

An Ordinance of the City of Beverly Hills amending the Beverly Hills Municipal Code to adopt a view restoration program for the Trousdale Estates area of the City.

Trousdale Estates is defined in the zoning code as all property located north of Doheny Road and east of Schuyler road, except that land zoned R-1.X, and that portion of lot A of the Doheny Ranch Tract northwesterly of Tract Numbers 24485 and 24486, commonly referred to as the Greystone Mansion Property.

The City's intent in developing a view restoration ordinance is to restore and preserve certain views from substantial disruption by the growth of privately owned vegetation while also providing for the following important City goals: residential privacy and security; garden quality of the City; safety and stability of the hillsides; and, importance of trees and vegetation in the City as an integral part of a sustainable environment.

The ordinance proposes to achieve these goals by establishing view criteria and a review process with an emphasis on early neighbor resolution of view restoration complaints.

The ordinance includes four main components:

- 1. View Regulations (includes definitions and findings that must be made by a reviewing authority);
- 2. Exemption Area (establish parameters for foliage not subject to the regulations);
- Review Process (multi-step process including Initial Neighbor Outreach and Mediation that could result in a Planning Commission or City Council decision);
- 4. Enforcement (one-time enforcement of a City decision with any costs borne by property owner receiving the decision to restore a view).

Trousdale Estates neighbors with view issues may address their issues in any manner they choose; however, if a property owner wishes to preserve the opportunity to have a case heard by the Planning Commission, the City's review process must be completed.

Application fees for a City view restoration permit hearing before the Planning Commission would be borne by the view owner (property owners alleging disruption of views). Costs for restoring views, e.g. tree trimming, could be borne by the view owner or foliage owner (property owner with foliage alleged to disrupt a view), depending on when resolution is reached and the level of participation by the foliage owner.

This is a separate ordinance from an ordinance adopted by the City Council in August, 2011, that established additional maximum height regulations for fences and hedges on certain slopes between properties in Trousdale Estates.

A certified copy of the entirety of the text of Ordinance No. 11-O-2616 is available for public inspection in the office of the City Clerk, 455 N. Rexford Drive, Beverly Hills, CA 90210. Further information may be obtained by contacting the Community Development Department at (310)285-1135.

spective, I will never make a decision just for the money."

In his remarks to the City Council, Jim Falk Lexus attorney Mitchell Dawson said Lexus Corporate has been pressuring the dealership to expand for years, and timing was critical for approval.

"The project cannot withstand further change to its operation or its structure," Dawson said. "It has already lost a great deal of space needed to make it a luxury dealership as Beverly Hills deserves."

Dawson outlined some of the modifications made to the proposal since it was initially presented to the Planning Commission, including a reduction in height by more than 10 feet, an increase in on-site parking spaces, and locating all service bays below ground.

Webb thanked the City Council for extending notice of the appeal hearing to more residents than were notified earlier in the process.

"We have a history in this community of providing—especially for large projects—expanded notice," Webb said. "It wasn't until I raised that issue with the five of you that you provided that notice. You can see as a result of that, a number of people showed up at the informal meeting [last week] and a number of people are here tonight. One could argue that the [4-0] vote or conditions imposed by the Planning Commission may have been significantly different had these neighbors shown up and raised issue and complained."

Webb said he felt strongly the project is inappropriate adjacent to a residential neighborhood.

"You have to make a finding that this project won't be detrimental to the adjacent properties," Webb said. "I don't believe you can make that finding, not from the testimony of the people that are here."

Most of the approximately 30 residents who addressed the council or submitted notes expressed concerns about the project. A few residents spoke in support of the project, including Joe Safier, who lives on the corner of South Maple Drive and Charleville Boulevard.

"I believe the numerous conditions imposed by the Planning Commission will effectively compel the dealership to minimize impacts on the neighborhood, and my proactive neighbors and I will be vigilant about those conditions," Safier said. "As a taxpayer, I believe the City should be mindful of the positive revenue impacts of car dealerships. Let's not drive more businesses [like BMW] out of the City."

Dawson said he thought Monday night's hearing showed municipal government at its best.

"I was impressed with the city council having done their homework, and truly trying to reach a balance between the issues the neighborhood has and the needs that the City has for businesses such as Jim Falk Lexus," Dawson said Tuesday.

Webb said he was disappointed in the decision.

"Having sat as a councilmember, I understand the difficulty that the council faces in balancing the fiscal needs of the City with protecting the residential quality of our life," Webb said. "It will remain to be seen whether all of the conditions that have been imposed will in fact mitigate against the impacts that this project will bring to the residents."

Planning Commission hands historic preservation ordinance off to City Council

It is now up to the City Council to make a historic preservation ordinance in Beverly Hills a reality. The Planning Commission voted 5-0 Monday afternoon to recommend the ordinance to the City Council.

The City Council assigned the Planning Commission the task of drafting an ordinance to protect the City's historic properties this past summer following the near demolition of a Sunset Boulevard home that was designed by master architect Richard Neutra and his son Dion Neutra. Dozens of residents, community members and representatives of the Los Angeles Conservancy urged the council to stop the demolition process of the property, and to set up provisions to prevent the loss of additional historic resources.

The ordinance will involve creating a local register of historic properties and districts that would be subject to the ordinance. A five-member Cultural Heritage Commission would be established to oversee the City's historic preservation program, create the local register, make recommendations to the City

Last Friday, a group of Beverly High seniors, Madrigals, and members of cheer and band delivered toys and participated in holiday activities with the students of Albion Street Elementary in East Los Angeles. The annual visit by Beverly High students has been a holiday tradition since 1927. Beverly High teacher Michelle Halimi's service learning class organized the program, which raised thousands of dollars to purchase gifts for the elementary students.

Council regarding a property's eligibility to be listed in the register, and review certain applications to alter historic properties. The Commission will also compile a list of architects recognized by the City as master architects, and properties in the City designed by those architects could be subject to the ordinance.

Though properties would be listed on the register involuntarily, and owners of historic properties would be required to go through a review process before remodeling or demolishing their properties, Planning Commission Chair Dan Yukelson said benefits and incentives would be established, such as property tax benefits in exchange for maintaining a historic property.

"This isn't an ordinance that will cast a wide net over the City," Yukelson said. "It's really going to be [a limited number of] properties that fall under this ordinance."

The ordinance will not apply to school properties, because they are owned by the BHUSD

Yukelson said he expects the City Council to consider the matter on its agenda in January.

"The City Council needs to decide on a couple of things, like what types of penalties to impose if someone doesn't follow the ordinance, and also the council needs to come up with incentives that will be in place if a property is subject to this ordinance," Yukelson said.

Commissioners Noah Furie and Brian Rosenstein worked with staff on Nov. 17 and 28 to draft the ordinance. The subcommittee met again Dec. 12 to go over the Commission's suggestions from the Dec. 8 meeting during which the first draft of the ordinance was reviewed.

Monday was Furie's last Planning Commission meeting. Though most commissioners serve a maximum of six years, Furie's term was extended for a seventh year to provide continuity on the Lexus Project. Traffic & Parking Commissioner Howard Fisher has been selected to fill Furie's seat.

Wood back as Indian Wells interim city manager

After Indian Wells City

Manager Greg Johnson resigned this past October, Wood said he was approached by a couple of former mayors who asked if Wood would step in as interim city manager.

"I said I hadn't planned to be an interim city manager—I felt 40 years was sufficient—but they made it a pretty flexible schedule and limited and narrowed the number of goals I have to achieve to a reasonable amount in a short period of time," said Wood, who started work on Nov. 1. "That made it pleasant. I'm having a really good time coming back."

Wood said leading up to Johnson's resignation, there was a series of disagreements.

"I think Greg in the end felt it was probably in his and the City's best interest to go separate ways," Wood said.

Wood, who was Indian Wells' city manager from 1989 to 1992, said he believes he was approached because he was already familiar with the many government agencies with which the City cooperates, including the Coachella Valley Association of Governments.

Wood said so far it has been going well, and he has enjoyed re-connecting with the few employees he worked with in the past who are still employed by the City.

According to Wood, interim city managers are restricted by law from working for more than one year and more than 960 hours in a fiscal year. Since the fiscal year will start over in the middle of Wood's interim term, he said he has been working an average of about 30 hours a week. He said he is earning a flat retainer of $15,000 a month with no benefits. Interim city managers have all the same responsibilities as permanent city managers, Wood said. Indian Wells, which has a population of approximately 5,000, contracts out many of its services, including police and fire, and has only 29 employees. Beverly Hills, a full-service City, employs over 950 people, including part-time staff members.

When asked if the City is currently seeking a permanent City manager, Wood said the City is discussing whether the current city council should make the decision, or if the City should wait until the new city council is elected in November 2012, when three seats are up for election. If the City waits until November 2012, Wood said he would likely serve until Nov. 1, and an internal City employee would likely fill in on an interim basis until the new city council hires a permanent city manager.

Planning Commission scales back Thompson Hotel rooftop's weeknight hours

The Planning Commission voted 5-0 Dec. 19 to extend the Thompson Hotel's conditional use permit (CUP), but denied the hotel's application to increase occupancy of the hotel's rooftop pool-deck and bar area from 125 to 185 guests, and to extend its hours until 2 a.m. Sunday through Thursday.

The hotel's existing hours of operation are until 1 a.m. Sunday through Thursday, and until 2 a.m. Friday and Saturday.

In 2010, the Thompson Hotel, located at Wilshire and Crescent, was granted a renewal and modification of its CUP to increase rooftop occupancy from 92 to 125 guests. The CUP was set to expire after one year, unless an application for renewal was submitted, which is what the Planning Commission considered earlier this week.

Due to noise complaints from residents living near the hotel, the Planning Commission decided not to grant an increase in occupancy or extension of hours, and instead decided to require the rooftop to close at midnight Sunday through Thursday instead of 1 a.m.

Prior to the meeting, three residents submitted letters to the City stating their opposition to increased rooftop occupancy and extended hours. One resident addressed the Commission with concerns about noise.

"We are affected adversely by the Thompson Hotel's request to increase their hours each day of the week to 2 a.m.," wrote Joy Strickland, manager of the apartment building at 121 South Elm Drive. "Tenants in our building often hear people in the middle of the night who have been partying in the immediate area, walking by in loud fashion or walking back to their cars. It disrupts our sleep and ability to live peacefully, and I would like to raise an objection to this proposal."

The CUP will be up for review by the Planning Commission in one year.

"We'll give them another fair hearing at that time," Commission Chair Dan Yukelson said. "They're welcome to [apply for] additional extended hours and additional occupancy at that time. First, they have to prove they can be a good neighbor."

Attorney Mitchell Dawson, who represents the Thompson Hotel, called the hotel's rooftop a rare environment in Beverly Hills.

"I was disappointed in the decision, and wished that [the Planning Commission] had treated the credibility of testimony in different proportions, but it was their decision to make." Dawson said.

Dawson said his client would study where the noise complaints are coming from in order to address them. Dawson said one idea that was proposed by the Planning Commission was to allow higher speaker volume on the Wilshire side than the alley side of the rooftop.

Traffic & Parking Commission elects Steinberg as chair; establishes committee to tackle disabled parking abuse

At the Traffic & Parking Commission's Dec. 15 meeting, Vice Chair Julie Steinberg was elected chair and Commissioner Alan Grushcow was elected vice chair.

Prior to the election, Jeff Levine, who still has more than two years left of his term, presided over his final meeting as chair.

"I have offered my assistance to both of them [Steinberg and Grushcow] to help them in any way I can and also requested that some of the work we started under my term be continued, like smart traffic management, which is a new focus for this commission," Levine said."I think it's a huge issue and something that really needs a lot more attention than it's been given in the past."

At the Dec. 15 meeting, the Traffic & Parking Commission agreed to form an ad hoc committee, represented by Levine and Commissioner Andy Licht, that will work with the City's transportation and police departments and City Treasurer Eliot Finkel's office to address disabled parking placard abuse.

"I'm hoping that we can move forward with the disabled placard abuse ad hoc committee and get things done both locally and on the state level, because the state level is really the guiding force," Levine said. "If the state decides to champion legislation that reforms the way the system works in regard to disabled placards, I think cities will follow suit and hopefully will [improve the] situation for those disabled persons who really need the parking spaces and who are being cheated out of them by those who don't need them."

Levine said he intends to contact Assemblymember and Speaker Pro Tem Fiona Ma (D–San Francisco), who has sponsored legislation to combat disabled placard abuse, to see if she would like to work with Beverly Hills on the issue. Levine said he would also like to explore how police department volunteers could help with monitoring and reporting disabled placard abuse. Another idea the committee plans to look into is forming panels within the Westside Council of Governments to adjudicate disabled placard violations in the region. The committee will also attempt to study physician issuance of disabled placards, Levine said.

"The last thing we talked about, which is extremely important, is soliciting experience from the Disabled Persons' Organization," Levine said. "Those stakeholders [can] work with us in changing the process and the system so it's better for them, too."

In addition to impacting people who are actually disabled, Levine said abuse of disabled placards leads to loss of revenue because vehicles can remain parked for extended periods of time without paying for parking.

In Issue #603, the Weekly reported DMV investigators conducted targeted enforcement operations on the 300 block of North Camden Drive and cited seven drivers on Feb. 28 and four drivers on April 12 for disabled parking violations

"We get quite a few complaints from citizens and merchants regarding placard abuse," Beverly Hills Police Lt. Mark Rosen said in April.

Rosen said the North Camden Drive location was targeted because of a complaint from a resident, who had noticed a number of cars with disabled placards parked in front of Sports Club LA.

"What makes handicapped parking difficult to enforce is not everyone has a visible handicap," Rosen said. "People [who] have ailments may be going into the health club for physical therapy. There's no doubt there is handicapped [parking] abuse going on. We'll do everything we can do to enforce it."

The Commission also voted 6-0 to modify parking regulations on the 8500 block of Clifton Way from "2-hour parking, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., daily, and no parking 5 p.m. to 2 a.m., daily" to "No parking anytime, Permit 'X'

Negatives and positives

GOOD PEOPLE, GOOD DEEDS

Our unofficial handle may be "Smart City," but with very small apologies to Tennessee, a more appropriate name should really be "Community of Volunteers."

If Beverly Hills has one, continuing tradition it is citizen participation and giving back. From the PTAs, Maple Counseling Center, Beverly Hills Education Foundation, Chamber of Commerce, youth sports, Active Adults, Rotary, the myriad religious organizations and countless charities and social service organizations the community supports with funding and volunteer time, we are caring and giving.

Which brings me to one of my favorites, Friends of the Library. Last week the group held its annual holiday party at the soon to be renovated main auditorium.

Attending were a host of city officials including Mayor Barry Brucker and Councilmember John Mirisch. It was especially significant that Betty Harris was also recognized. Betty, a longtime community activist, has always made the library one of her primary interests, and that resource is better for her involvement.

Presiding were Friends president Charlotte Skura, vice president Kathi Rothner (a recent Recreation and Parks Commissioner), and immediate past president Barbara Linder, (now Human Relations Commission chair.)

Entertainment was provided by the marvelous high school Madrigal Singers, although notably absent was their founder and director, Joel Pressman, who is coping with some health problems.

Handling the introductions was city staffer Nancy Hunt-Coffey, who may have the longest job title in government: Assistant Director of Community Services/Librarian. Under her able leadership, the library is bustling with activities, visitors and a soon to be started major remodeling.

One of the other programs of the Friends is the splendid book store inside the facility. This may well be our only surviving book outlet, but it is stocked with great titles, very inexpensive and wonderful volunteer helpers.

Whenever I see Betty Harris I am reminded of the second Library Bond campaign which I was honored to manage. Betty really kept the campaign on track by directing the volunteers, one of whom was the late former school board president Ernest Ach, who also became a book store volunteer.

Betty will remember what the then-librarian, Lura Wallace, told us she could do if the library bond was defeated. The then-library was housed on the second floor of city hall, above the council chambers, and it was overloaded with books, tables and hardly functional. Not a symbol of our city's dedication to cultural resources.

Ms. Wallace, who could easily have been cast as a middle America school marm of the early 20th Century, but who had a marvelous, flinty sense of humor said that she had a solution for a bond failure: "Why, I will simply call back all the outstanding books, and the second floor will collapse and land on a council meeting." Fortunately for the city and council, it won big.

LEXUS AND INSULTING THE COUNCIL

Speaking of testy people, a person I have known for years, name withheld because of the season, is, privately, one of the most charming, sociable community activists around. But when she appears at a council meeting, something not so friendly always emerges.

The occasion was the long and very trying hearing on the appeal for the Lexus project. The "activist" confronted the council with repeated and angry exclamations of "shame on you."

What triggered this outburst was an instance that the council was responsible for not giving adequate notice. So, aside from countless news stories, public notice publications and mailings, and data easily available on the city web site, a simple phone call to city hall would have provided any information about hearings any interested person could possibly want or need.

Lexus has been in public discussion for years, and it would have been almost impossible not to know when hearings on appeals would be heard. Yes, it might be wise to expand the mailing notices to a wider area, however even some residents who live on the north side of Wilshire, not immediate neighbors, participated at the public hearing.

But to attack the decision makers on the notice issue, to insult them with cries of "shame" certainly could not have come at a less appropriate moment.

The Lexus hearings continued until 1:30 a.m. with the mayor and councilmembers demonstrating enormous tolerance for both proponents and opponents of the project, often allowing longer than rules permitted time for talks.

What the critic might also have considered was the council workload for the day of the hearing. It began at 2 p.m. with a study session that heard reports from a key government efficiency committee, costs of view enforcement in Trousdale and various department matters, none of these easy or simplistic.

From there it was a closed session to discuss pending legal matters with the city attorney, a quick break and back for the formal meeting. None of this considers the enormous time and energy required to prepare for the meetings; just completing all the voluminous staff reports and appellant correspondence is a daunting task—and these five all do their homework.

So, crying "shame" on this issue and on this trying day might not have been the best tactic to win the council's minds and hearts. Incidentally, we knew that Mayor Brucker, Vice Mayor Dr. Willie Brien and Councilmember John Mirisch are detail wonks, but good to know that our newest members Dr. Julian Gold and Lili Bosse are equally committed and come prepared.

However, it was Councilmember Bosse who starred Monday night. I have been a council watcher for many years now, but I have never heard a more detailed analysis on any appeal, ever. Her comprehensive research on every possible issue and the questions that followed were impressive and on target. They ranged from comments on the Environmental Impact Report to staff analysis, commission findings, traffic mitigation, conditional use permit and everything in between.

No Lexus automobile ever had as thorough an inspection.

All of this led to a council approval, but with some 118 conditions. These include test drives of cars, operation hours for service, parking, alley use and delivery. With other amendments, the council basically upheld the planning commission.

The challenge now is to assure that Lexus actually complies with all the conditions imposed. Yes, we need the revenue provided by auto dealers and this project was reduced in height to meet council and neighbors' objections, but frankly, Lexus has not been a very good neighbor. Their impact on the residential areas has often been less than considerate.

Although it may turn out to be helpful, allowing deliveries on Wilshire has been mostly prohibited for years. Even Wilshire Boulevard hotels do not have passenger or delivery facilities, nor do the major department stores.

Speaking of council decisions, good work on the view ordinance, not easy to arrive at a Solomon finding. One homeowner wants the right to have an unimpaired view, the one there when the home was purchased. Another owner finds beauty in trees and shrubbery that grow and impact views.

The new ordinance, and resident costs of enforcement, will probably not please everyone, but at least it is a first step at reconciliation of different needs and was achieved, mostly, in a very civil discourse. Among the view proponents, former planning commissioner Shahram Melamed was among the most rational and responsible.

The committee and staff work on Government Efficiency, chaired by Vice Mayor Willie Brien and vice chair planning commissioner Noah Furie came up with some critical and helpful means of processing applications in an even more expeditious manner. More on this in a later column, including recognition of other committee members.

SELECTED SHORT SUBJECTS

Newest entry at the Four Corners: U.Sushi, granted, not my favorite food. The eatery will occupy space that previously was a Jamba Juice and Belgian fine chocolate shop. Corinne Griffith, the child actress who became a major silent film star, saved her money and built the Four Corners at Charleville and south Beverly Drives, never encouraged food tenants. Now many of the four buildings have small restaurants

Next month Beverly Hills will once again be home to an event that probably gives us more favorable attention than all the other promotions combined, the annual Golden Globes at the Beverly Hilton.

Always a more relaxed and friendly happening than many other award programs, the Foreign Press Association will once again help fill all our hotels and restaurants. Thanks for remaining loyal to the Hilton and our city. As for your choice of m.c's, you are forgiven.

Speaking of the Hilton, the poster person for giving back and volunteerism, company exec, Corinne Verdery, will be honored along with the icons of community support, Toni and Bruce Corwin, at the fifth annual "Beverly Hills Purim Ball" for Temple Emanuel on Wednesday, February 29, 2012.

Ms. Verdery is, among other civic activities, a very important asset for our Maple Counseling Center. The Corwins are community legends, cited as a great example of involvement and generosity, a long family tradition

Political thoughts: I usually avoid comments on Republicans, leaving that to my colleagues at the other paper, but a very dangerous and flaky political event might just happen in Iowa next month: Ron Paul could win or come close in the state's caucus vote.

He may sound amusing, quaint or even thought provoking with his supposed libertarian opinions, but if you listen carefully you will hear the most outrageous views on everything from foreign aid, to Israel and Iran and federal government responsibilities.

For starters, Paul does not want us to provide foreign aid anywhere. Back to the days of isolationism that led to World War II. He does not want us to even touch Iran's nuclear capabilities, hinting that we are not doing the same to Israel.

As all the front runners for the GOP primaries seem to self-destruct each week, Paul and his anti-government message may indeed resonate with the most likely Republican voters in Iowa, if not the majority of real people.

Fortunately, as "Iowa goes" does not usually mean much in the open, later primaries, but still a Paul win or big vote would send a chilling message throughout the world. Whoever thought I would be rooting for a big vote for the Newt man. Have no idea where Mitt Romney stands on most issues. He backed off on some relating to support of Israel.

With the economy showing dramatic improvements, the end of our involvement in Iraq, the "elimination" of countless terrorists, including their top leaders, the Republican primaries may not be as relevant as they hoped. Barack Obama will be ready for the debates.

Great Reading: A remarkable book about the legendary Fred Hayman is available at online book venues, and is a most enjoyable read. A book signing private party held at the Montage Beverly Hills recently helped get the word out, but this work is both fun, honest and informative about Fred, Rodeo Drive and our village.

"Fred Hayman, The Extraordinary Difference" is a pictorial and creative work of excellence, written by former fashion editor guru Rose Apodaca.

It is not all "ups" either—candid and honest depiction of an amazing life story.

The city may soon host a book signing at the library, but as a gift for your own enjoyment, this is a work we really can recommend, and that has absolutely nothing to do with the photo in the back of the book of two unidentified people happily chatting: Councilmember John Mirisch and your columnist. That was a fun time.

Rudy Cole served for eight years as a member and chair of the city's Recreation & Parks Commission. He was also President of the Greystone Foundation and served on three other city committees. Rudy can be reached at: Rudy@bhweekly.

exempt." Commissioner Ira Friedman was not present.

According to the agenda, five of six single-family households on Clifton between Stanley Drive and La Cienega Boulevard and the adjacent section of Le Doux Road north of Clifton Way within the City limits signed a petition in support of modifying parking regulations.

"[The residents] are concerned about the intrusion of the commercial district from the [SLS] Hotel in Los Angeles around the corner and others taking up parking spots," Levine said. "Since Le Doux went permit only, the concern is the people that were parking there will now park on Clifton."

Architectural Commission approves new restaurant, retail update

Allen Rennett

T h e Architectural Commission approved four façade remodels and continued consideration of another at the Dec. 14 commission meeting.

In a 5-1 vote, with

Vice Chair Allen Rennett dissenting, the Commission approved designs for Yojisan, a new restaurant at 260 North Beverly Drive. Though Rennett declined to discuss in detail why he voted against the project, he said he had "different creative judgment." The designs of the façade involve combining wood and steel with clear glass entry doors. Chair Fran Cohen did not attend the meeting because she was out of town.

The Architectural Commission unanimously approved another project in the triangle, an update to retailer Roberto Cavalli at 362 North Rodeo Drive.

"That was a great project," Rennett said. "In any other city, if they had come in with the old store design they would be thrilled, but here they've taken that very nice design and they're going to replace it with something even better. I think it's going to be a really exciting project."

The update will involve installing a backlit glass panel, back-painted glass, aluminum-framed windows, and clear glass entry doors with a burnished brass frame. The new sign features a backlit, sandblasted logo on back-painted glass above the entry.

Next door, the Architectural Commission considered the application for two retail shops—Patek Philippe and Rolex—connected internally by a walkway at the Luxe Hotel at 360 North Rodeo Drive. The Commission agreed to continue the item to a future meeting to give the architect a chance to revise the project.

"It's a difficult situation that they're in because it's part of the hotel, and so they're under constraints with what they can do with the front and they're ending up with two very small stores," Rennett said. "It's a tough one to work with and we just want them to go back and try to do a little more to try to distinguish them."

As proposed, the Patek Philippe façade incorporates a metallic anthracite finish, etched glass entry door, clear laminated glass for storefront windows, and botticino classic stone flooring at the entryway. Rolex was proposed to have a polished gold finish for the entry door, clear laminated glass and bronzed glass framing for the storefront windows, and crema marfil stone flooring at the entryway.

The Commission also approved designs for Dior in the MGM building, which was originally intended for William Morris, at 265 North Beverly Drive. The remodel consists of a black vinyl wrap around the window areas, seven "Dior" signs and a graphic that will

coverstory A DAY IN THE LIFE OF IL FORNAIO

Meet the team that brings authentic Italian cuisine to your table By Melanie Anderson

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 16, 2011 301 NORTH BEVERLY DRIVE

11:25 a.m.

The restaurant is calm when I enter, with just three tables occupied and one woman seated at the counter. A hostess greets me, who tells me Maria D'Auria, the general manager who I am scheduled to meet, is upstairs in her office. I'm early so I head over to the bakery café portion of the restaurant to order a cup of coffee. Save for the Christmas carols playing, it is quiet.

11:30 a.m.

A man wearing a stylish brown three-piece suit with a pale yellow tie strolls to the host station to chat with staff. By the way he's dressed and his confident manner, he looks like he could be the restaurant's owner. I learn later he is a regular, who comes in at least three times a week. His name is Luis, but the staff calls him by an Italian name, Luigi.

11:35 a.m.

"Buon giorno," I am greeted by Maria, a slim woman dressed all in black with a festive scarf. She introduces me to Giampaolo Santoni, another manager who is helping to prepare for a private holiday party for a doctor's office. Maria leads me to the sala affresco, the private dining room in the back where the restaurant will serve 45 guests who are expected to arrive in less than one hour. She shows me how the room opens into the main dining room for additional seating when there is no private event. Another doctor's office's holiday party is scheduled for tonight.

As general manager, Maria's job is to make sure the restaurant runs smoothly. Maria tells me she likes being in charge, but she also thinks of her staff as family. "I'm the mama," she says. Maria is also responsible for making sure customers have a pleasant experience. "I try to handle personally every complaint," Maria says.

Maria seats me at the counter near the back of the restaurant. This seems like a good place to observe the open kitchen directly in front of me and almost the entire dining room if I angle myself a certain way.

of fettuccine, spaghetti and capellini; sauces; mushrooms; and several types of tomatoes: fresh-cut, stewed, sundried, and cherry. The dried pasta is imported from Italy, and a pasta chef makes fresh pastas including ravioli, tortellini, gnocchi, and lasagne in house.

I meet Giuliano Mosca, the outgoing young senior sous chef who sings and whistles while he works. The kitchen staff is preparing for the private party in addition to the regular lunch rush. Maria tells me the private parties are offered a fixed menu to facilitate serving all guests simultaneously. Since many lunch guests are professionals, Maria says, "At lunch, we need to run, run, run." Dinner can be more relaxed. "We do miracles," Giuliano says with a grin.

Maria excuses herself for a quick staff meeting. The managers and servers gather at the host station, and Giampaolo leads the meeting with animated hand gestures. Maria says staff assembles before the rush to make sure everyone knows the special, is aware of the private party and where they're supposed to be. Typically, Maria works with an assistant

In front of me is the pasta station, with bins

I don't see the server whisk the dish away because Carla Baldieri, another server who is from Rome, introduces herself and offers me something to drink, but I'm still nursing my coffee. Rudy reappears to tell me the most popular lunch item is sogliola limone e capperi, filet of sole sautéed with lemon juice, capers, extra virgin olive oil, and a touch of butter, with mashed potatoes and spinach on the side. He offers it to me. It's tempting. "Maybe later," I say.

Giuliano tells me as senior sous chef, his duties include supervising "back of house," or the kitchen staff, keeping track of their shifts and breaks, and handling deliveries. It's a nonstop job, he explains, but he does manager and seven servers are assigned to everything with a smile on his face. Giuliano each shift throughout the day.

11:50 a.m.

I meet Rodolfo "Rudy" Mena, a server who has worked at the restaurant for 23 years. He has been working since 6:30 a.m., before the restaurant opened. He tells me about regular customers who have been coming for over 20 years. Four of them arrive promptly at 7 a.m. every day; two men sit at Table 44, and a couple sits at Table 16 by the window, not far from where I'm seated. Rudy tells me their orders: oatmeal with mixed berries, banana, cinnamon and raisins for the men, and the couple shares an egg-white omelet with smoked salmon and goat cheese and fruit on the side. As we chat, Fariba, another regular, says goodbye to Rudy. "I'll tell you my whole story in two minutes," Rudy says, and he goes to greet another couple he knows seated nearby. Though Rudy will stop by to visit throughout the day, unfortunately I won't get to hear his story because lunch today is too busy.

The kitchen is becoming more active. A cook empties a tray of fresh salmon ravioli into one of five pots of boiling water on the stove. The stove also has room for six saucepans, all of which will soon be in simultaneous use. Giuliano empties a pan of capellini with pomodoro sauce into a dish and places it on the counter for a server to pick up.

The restaurant is now about half full, and the kitchen has become noticeably busier. Five cooks are gathered in front of me. Carla stops by, suggesting I order now before the kitchen becomes too busy. It already looks busy.

12:20 p.m.

12:30 p.m.

Maria tells me the party is ready. Still only one guest has arrived, but the rest will be here soon. Maria speaks to the kitchen staff in Italian before dashing off again.

I am served a bowl of bread with the restaurant's famous ciabatta, two different kinds of rolls and a side of extra virgin olive oil, which is imported from Umbria. The ciabatta is light, fluffy with crisp crust, and still warm. I meet Gustav Asmann, director of sales who is in charge of the bakery and has worked in Beverly Hills since it opened as a bakery nearly 30 years ago. Originally from Germany, Gustav said his family has operated a bakery for generations. He relocated to California after a vacation in 1975. He tells me all bread is baked in house. The ciabatta recipe—flour, water, yeast and salt—has not changed in 30 years, and in fact is a 1,000-year-old recipe. Gustav divides his time between the Beverly Hills location and making sales on the road to supermarkets and restaurants all over the country.

Rodolfo "Rudy" Mena, Maria D'Auria, Giuseppe DiMola, Brian Nesbitt

12:40 p.m.

My food arrives and Rudy stops by to offer fresh ground pepper. "Great recommendation, huh?" The filet of sole is moist and flaky with a thin crust and a refreshing lemon flavor. Giuliano explains the fish is sautéed, then finished in the oven. I count eight kitchen staff members behind the counter. "It's teamwork," he says. Il Fornaio is unique, he says, because there's little separation between supervising chefs and line cooks. "We get down and dirty with them," he says.

Executive chef Giuseppe DiMola says the kitchen is typically staffed with one sous chef and three to four line cooks at breakfast, and one sous chef and five to six line cooks at lunch and dinner. On the weekends, staffing is increased because the restaurant is busier. Maria says typically 100 breakfasts, 200 lunches and 300 dinners are served per day. Today is busier, and by the end of lunch 250 to 300 lunches will be served.

Maria stops by to ask about my meal. I try to think of the perfect Italian superlative—I studied Italian for 2 ½ years in college—but all that comes to mind is buono.

The restaurant is almost completely full. Two young ladies meet for lunch. "You look so cute! Did you just get your hair done?"

As I take my last bite of fish, Giuliano informs me he has checked in the last delivery of the day of poultry and other meat products. This should hold the restaurant over until the next morning, he says.

1 p.m.

Brian Nesbitt, the restaurant's full-time event coordinator, comes over to introduce himself. He is a friendly young man, dressed in a royal purple sweater with a matching polka-dot bow tie. Brian's work is done for the ongoing private party, since he is in charge of preparatory details, but he has plenty to do today since he schedules and coordinates all the restaurant's events, including wine tastings and cooking classes that are held in the private room about once a month. Just the night before, Brian says he put together an impromptu engagement party for 15 guests with a special dessert. He excuses himself to take a phone call. "We have a party of 20 scheduled for February," he announces upon his return.

Brian says December is the busiest time of year for events, with at least one scheduled almost every day. In September, Brian sees lots of business presentations, June is big for graduation parties, and July and August are busy months for rehearsal dinners.

Brian says business is up this December from last. "We were affected [by the economy] like everyone else," Brian says, but the restaurant's loyal local customers have helped. At the moment, we don't see any celebrities, but Brian says they come frequently. Brian says Maria often doesn't recognize them, but the one time he saw her truly excited about a celebrity visit was when tenor Andrea Bocelli came to dine.

1:35 p.m.

The restaurant is full. Customers wait at the host station for a table to become available.

1:40 p.m.

I meet executive chef Giuseppe DiMola, who has been at the Beverly Hills restaurant since 2002. He grew up and attended culinary school in the Puglia region of Italy before arriving in the United States in 1984. "At Il Fornaio I feel like I'm in Italy because of the atmosphere, the ambience, and the passion," Giuseppe says. "It's a beautiful city known throughout the world," he says of Beverly Hills.

Giuseppe, a serious but pleasant man, says he prefers simple, "true Italian" cuisine featuring tomato, garlic and basil. As executive chef, Giuseppe is in charge of the kitchen. One important responsibility is creating the special. Giuseppe tells me about Il Fornaio's Festa Regionale menus, which feature food, wine and bread from a different region of Italy each month. Giuseppe's Pugliese menu was featured this past February at each of the 23 Il Fornaio locations. The December "Best of Festa" menu features the top recipes of the year, including three of Giuseppe's recipes.

Giuseppe says Puglia is known for seafood because of its coastal location; a pasta dish called orecchiette con cime di rapa featuring broccoli rab; Pugliese bread; grapes and a type of olive found only in the Gargano area of Puglia. I have just finished sampling the large green olive called la bella cerignola, when my dessert arrives, bianco mangiare ai grutti di bosco, an almond custard with toasted almonds, raspberries and blackberries drenched in caramel and vanilla bean sauce.

2:30 p.m.

At last, the party has placed its order. Maria reports the boss is dressed as Santa, and everyone seems to be having a good time. As the kitchen staff springs to action, Giuseppe tells me about the Italian stars in addition to Bocelli who have visited the Beverly Hills location: pop singer Laura Pausini, rock artist Zucchero, Italian singer-songwriter Vasco Rossi and pop singer Eros Ramazzotti. Giampaolo pops by and tells me enthusiastically he took a photo with Laura.

2:45 p.m.

More than 20 pasta bowls are laid out on the counter in preparation for serving the party. Giuliano and the line cooks distribute at least three different kinds of pasta into the dishes. Next comes roast chicken, mashed potatoes and mixed vegetables.

2:55 p.m.

Luigi vacates his window table, says goodbye to Maria, calls out to the kitchen staff, and heads out the door.

3 p.m

With the party's lunch orders successfully completed, the kitchen continues churning out regular lunch orders. "You feel proud when the restaurant is working well," Giuseppe says. Giuliano agrees: "I love music. [The kitchen staff] is like an orchestra. Everything comes out melodically."

3:20 p.m.

It's dessert time for the party. Line cooks dish out 45 orders of tiramisu and chocolate mousse with raspberry sauce.

3:25 p.m.

A customer asks Giuseppe if Il Fornaio will be open on Christmas and New Year's. "Yes," he says, and directs him to the host to make reservations. Christmas is a good day for business, Giuseppe says, because many other restaurants are closed. Giuseppe excuses himself because it is already time to prepare for tonight's private dinner party, which will begin at 5:30.

3:35 p.m.

Maria sits next to me. I look at my watch. "3:35 and you can finally sit down," I say. She says "not really" since she still needs to make sure the lunch party vacates the private room in time to prepare for the dinner party.

I learn Maria grew up in Rome. "I was a lawyer in Italy," she tells me. Soon after Maria got married, her husband's friend opened a restaurant in Beverly Hills and the couple decided to come out to work for a year. Twenty years later, Maria and her husband have two daughters, ages eight and 19, and she says she doesn't see herself moving back to Italy unless she retires there. Maria works at least 10 hours a day, five or six days a week. Her husband works from the family's home in Beverly Hills two blocks from the restaurant as a web consultant. "I love that [I can walk to work]," Maria says.

Maria has been general manager in Beverly Hills for seven years, but she worked at the Santa Monica and Manhattan Beach locations first. She was Il Fornaio's first woman general manager. Now three out of 23 general managers are women.

The restaurant has thinned out, but Maria says she expects the dinner rush to be in full swing by 5:30 or 6. She said today was a typical lunch, fortunately with few complaints. A few customers grumbled about waiting for a table, but Maria says most customers understood, seeing there were no open tables. Now her biggest concern is making sure the party clears out. There are still about 25 guests lingering, she reports.

4:15 p.m.

Maria gives me a tour of the café bakery, showing me where additional tables will be set up to accommodate the dinner crowd. Behind the counter, she points out the ovens, where a fresh batch of bread comes out every half an hour.

"Do you work here?" a young woman asks me. "No, but she does," I gesture to Maria, and she asks where she can get her nails done. Maria directs them to Beverly Drive, south of Wilshire. She says she gets that kind of question a lot.

"It's a running place from 7 a.m. to 11 p.m.," Maria says. "You can't get bored."

4:20 p.m.

Though he was supposed to be finished by 4 p.m., Giuliano is still in the kitchen, making sure the lunch-to-dinner transition is smooth. Though no one on staff ever stops moving, it is markedly calmer in the restaurant, with only four tables occupied. Giampaolo sets up a table with kids' placemats and crayons. Families are beginning to arrive for dinner.

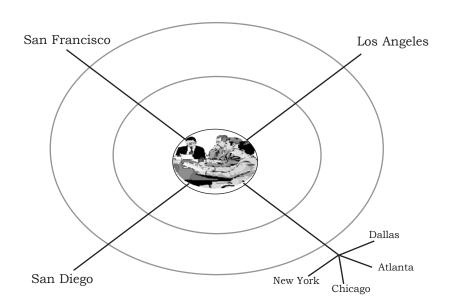

4:30 p.m.

There are still guests in the private room when I decide to call it a day. Maria is busy, but I thank and say goodbye to Giampaolo, who shows me a series of cell phone photos of him with a variety of Il Fornaio's celebrity guests, including Manny Ramirez, Christopher Lloyd, and Vasco Rossi. Though I did not spot any celebrities today, it was a treat getting to know the cast that runs the show at Il Fornaio.

Another approved project was the remodel of an existing multi-story office building at 144 South Beverly Drive. The applicant proposed a painted structural steel trellis, a clear glass storefront, LED strip lighting and brushed stainless steel pedestrian lights.

"Why all the anger?" [Issue #637]

It has been extremely difficult for me to drive by the artist Franz West's 18-foot-tall aluminum painted so-called art work at the northwest corner of Wilshire Boulevard and Beverly Drive. I find that I am now going out of my way to avoid that intersection.

The only thing I would agree with the artist about is the name of the abstract object, "The Unconscious." The color which the artist selected is also part of the atrocity.

I am familiar with the City's Public Art Ordinance, which encourages this sort of event, but that does not mean I should accept it without comment.

I would not have bothered to write this letter, but it was mentioned in Rudy Cole's column last week ... and my bet is that Rudy's comment would be the same as mine.

BHHS Boys' Soccer Team Edges Crossroads

Norman girls' soccer team defeats Long Beach Jordan By Steven Herbert

Nick Marmureanu scored off Bryan Khalilirad's assist in the first half to give the Beverly High boys' soccer team a 1-0 victory over Crossroads in a South Bay/Westside Tournament game Dec. 13 at Nickoll Field.

Adrian Spitz and Matt Davidov combined on the shutout, with Spitz making three saves and Davidov two.

The Normans (4-1-1) led in shots, 10-5.

South Bay/Westside Tournament Loyola 2, Beverly Hills 0

The Cubs scored twice against Spitz in the second half Dec. 8 at Nickoll Field, continuing their dominance over the Normans.

Davidov made two saves in the first half, Spitz made one in the second.

Beverly Hills led in shots, 16-5.

The Normans have defeated Loyola once and tied it twice since the school's boys' soccer program began in the 1973-74 season, according to Steve Rappaport, Beverly Hills' coach since the 1988-89 season.

Loyola was ranked eighth in the Southern Section Division 1 poll released Dec. 12, while the Normans were ranked eighth in Division 4.

Girls' Soccer

Mira Costa 2, Beverly Hills 0

The Mustangs scored in the 49th and 66th minutes of an 80-minute nonleague game at Nickoll Field Dec. 5.

Norman goalkeeper Ida Trevino made

"The second half was Mira Costa's speed beating us down the flanks," Normans coach Rvan Franks said.

"Our back line was exposed and that is the area that we are trying to improve right now. We had three all-league defenders graduate last year and this year we have lost our starting left back, Shayna Stein, with a torn anterior cruciate ligament for the remainder of the season"

Beverly Hills 4, Long Beach Jordan 2

Ashley Aviram scored three goals and assisted on Tylor Fields' goal and Trevino made seven saves for the Normans in a non-league game at Nickoll Field Dec. 6.

Fields, Sarah Patterson and Dinah Pourbaba also had assists for Beverly Hills

South Bay/Westside Tournament Palos Verdes 3, Beverly Hills 0

Trevino made 15 saves for the Normans (3-2) Dec. 7 at Palos Verdes.

The Sea Kings scored once in the first half and twice in the second.

Palos Verdes was ranked sixth in the Southern Section Division 2 poll released Dec. 12.

Wrestling

Warrior 6 Way

Beverly Hills won three of five matches and Norman wrestlers Nathan Bahk, Matt Kohanbash, Dylan Lojac, Axel Pinotti, and Marshall Stevens all won silver medals Dec. 9 at Westlake High School.

The Normans lost to Rosemead, 52-18, to open the tournament. The Panthers were ranked third in the preseason Southern Section Division 5 poll issued Nov. 14, the most recent poll released.

Beverly Hills then defeated Reseda, 62-18, lost to Westlake, 49-28, defeated Chaminade, 43-36, and Santa Paula, 51-26.

Bahk, who wrestled in the 108-pound division, Lojac, who wrestled in the 154-pound division and Stevens, who wrestled in the 197-pound division, all won four of five matches and recorded two pins.

Pinotti, the Norman heavyweight, won four of five matches, with one pin. Kohanbash, who wrestled in the 122-pound division, won three of five matches.

Beverly Hills wrestlers Dakota Anderson (140), Eddie Hong (162) and Juan Morales (172) all won silver medals, each winning three of five matches. Hong and Morales both recorded two pins and Anderson one.

Girls' Water Polo

Santa Ana Valley Tournament Sonora 7, Beverly Hills 5

The Normans led 3-1 at the end of the first quarter of their season opener, but were outscored 6-2 over the final three quarters of the pool play game Nov. 28 at Garden Grove High School.

Tammy Katz scored twice in the first quarter for the Normans and April Banayan once. Sonora's Elena Mendrin scored the only goal of the second quarter, cutting Beverly Hills lead to 3-2 at halftime.

The Raiders scored the first three goals of the second half for a 5-3 lead, but Celeste Bean scored for the Normans with 34 seconds left in the third quarter.

Jenny Partida scored for Beverly Hills with five minutes, 42 seconds to play, tying the score, 5-5, but Breanna Sussoev scored the tie-breaking goal 16 seconds later and an insurance goal with 2:34 remaining.

Norman goaltender Lorrain Oill made seven saves.

Girls' Basketball

St. Monica 57, Beverly Hills 47

The score was tied 34-34 entering the fourth quarter, but the Normans were outscored 23-13 in a nonleague game at the Swim-Gym Nov. 22.

"I think we ran out of gas," Beverly Hills coach John Braddell said after his team's season opener.

A problem with the clock caused the third quarter to "last 30 minutes on its own," Braddell said.

"We had to play extra minutes and it kind of hurt us in the fourth quarter," Braddell said

The Normans trailed 9-7 at the end of the first quarter and 27-18 at halftime, then outscored the Mariners, 15-7 in the third quarter to tie the score as junior guard Megan Yee made six of 11 free throws and sophomore Taylor McBride scored all five of her points.

"We played pretty well," Braddell said. "We came out and played very hard. Our effort was good."

Freshman forward Natasha Allen led Beverly Hills with nine points, including five in the fourth quarter. Dorsa Mehrannia added eight, including two 3-point baskets in the fourth quarter. Yee also scored eight points, Debbie Reyhan seven, Serena Shlomof six and Sydney Impellizzeri and Natasha Kashani two each.

Reyhan and Shlomof both made 3-point
