“Metro EIR targets Beverly Hills buildings for demolition” [Issue #652]

Metro needs to forget about Beverly High. I do believe a tunnel under BHHS would not be dangerous as Metro has said. However, I also believe a tunnel under the school would mean the land would not be as safe as it was before. Also, the school may need to build, rebuild or expand in the future to meet the needs of the school, its students and the city. A tunnel would make those future endeavors much harder if not impossible. Because our children come first, the tunnel needs to be built elsewhere.

Board blames Measure E tax hike on unrealized projections, interest rates

The Board of Education announced last week it is considering more than doubling the bond tax rate from $49.71 to $114 per $100,000 assessed value, and is citing unrealized property value projections and higher than estimated interest rates on the shortcomings of the Measure E program as justification for raising the rates.

Although at the time Measure E passed in 2008 the Board of Education promised the bond would be funded at the existing tax rate of $49.71, Board of Education President Brian Goldberg said last week the board does not plan to put the tax hike on the ballot for voters to decide. He cited the importance of addressing safety concerns at the campuses as quickly as possible.

The $114 tax rate the Board of Education is considering also reflects an increase in the rate of past bonds, Measures K (2002) and S (1993).

Tony Hsieh, managing director of Keygent Advisors, the BHUSD’s bond financial consultant, explained the scenario would allow BHUSD to set Measure E’s tax rate at the maximum of $60 per $100,000 assessed value. In addition, the tax rate for Measures K and S would be $54 per $100,000 assessed value, but would decline over time until the bonds are paid off in 2030. Residents would continue paying for Measure E until 2055.

Hsieh explained the increase in Measure K and S tax rates is due to the weak real estate market since tax rates were estimated based on property value growth projections.

Per California Education Code 15270, the maximum tax rate levied on bonds at a single election by a school district is $60 per $100,000 when property value is projected by the district to increase in accordance with Article XIII A of the California Constitution.

Regardless of its legality, raising the tax rate would break a promise made to voters in the ballot statement and in campaign materials in 2008 that existing taxes would not increase. A presentation Keygent made to the Board of Education last August showed BHUSD’s tax rate was in the bottom 25 percent of unified school district tax rates in Los Angeles County based on 2010-2011 tax rates. The increase to $114 would place BHUSD in the top 25 percent, and if the average rate of $75 estimated by Hsieh is realized, BHUSD would still be in the top 50 percent.

The current tax rate is already higher than promised, at $51.92 per $100,000 of assessed value.

Raising the tax rate will allow BHUSD access to its final bond installment in 2016, and to potentially complete construction at Beverly High by 2020.

Under the original schedule presented to voters in 2008, the last of the bonds would be issued in 2018. If tax rates are not raised, BHUSD anticipates the last of the bonds will not be issued until 2030. Accelerating the schedule would allow BHUSD to take advantage of current low construction costs.

Assessed value has fallen short of the BHUSD's projections since the program began in 2009, despite an expectation of 7 percent growth for the first year and 4.5 percent per year thereafter. In reality, assessed valuation grew by 6.1 percent in 2010, decreased 2.6 percent in 2011, and increased 1.2 percent in the current fiscal year.

"Overall [4.5 percent] is not an unreasonable rate, especially with Beverly Hills. Their long-term growth has been quite high," Hsieh said. "Had that [4.5 percent] played out, we'd probably be just fine."

Keygent was not working with BHUSD in 2008 at the time the projections were made. At that time, BHUSD awarded a no-bid contract to bond rating company George K.

Baum. A subsequent Board of Education fired the firm.

Timothy Bittle, director of legal affairs for the Howard Jarvis Taxpayers Association (HJTA), said under Article XIII A of the California Constitution, unified school districts are not supposed to set tax rates based on property value growth projections of more than 2 percent per year. However, he said it is legal for BHUSD to raise the tax rate within $60 per $100,000.

Proposed design for The Stinking Rose

Architectural Commission approves designs for new Chinese restaurant, update of The Stinking Rose

With the Architectural Commission's approval on March 21, a new Chinese restaurant, Hakkasan, is coming to Beverly Hills, and The Stinking Rose will update its look.

Hakkasan, a high-end Chinese restaurant that originated in Europe, is coming to 231 North Beverly Drive, on the ground floor of the office building currently occupied by MGM.

The restaurant's blue theme should fit well into the existing blue-tinted office building, Commission Chair Fran Cohen said.

The Commission approved the restaurant's design, with the request the architect not delete a horizontal element on the façade because it was part of the architecture of the original building.

"[Hakkasan] should be a great addition to Beverly Drive and our city," Cohen said.

The Commission approved The Stinking Rose's remodel designs after its second review. Following the Feb. 15 meeting, the Commission requested removal of wrought-iron detailing above the portico, and requested a design that articulated a vertical element and the portico, Cohen said. The approved re-design of the garlic-centric restaurant on North La Cienega Boulevard also features black, red and gold awnings and detailing on the portico and vertical element.

"I think by removing the metal over the canopy and making the standing [vertical] element relate to the parapet of the driveway, I think you've enhanced the architectural elements of the building very nicely," Commissioner James Blakeley told the applicant.

The Commission was unanimous in approving The Stinking Rose's remodel, and encouraged the applicant to take a look at the restaurant's landscaping.

"The Commission recommended to the applicant [that] they also revise the landscaping since they're introducing this new image of the restaurant," Cohen said.

The Stinking Rose President Jerry Dal Bozzo attended the meeting, and said he thought the project had improved based on the Commission's comments and direction.

The Solution To High Gas Prices? Go Metro.

With gas prices skyrocketing, there's never been a better time to Go Metro. You can save more than $10,000 a year by taking public transit instead of driving. President Proposes $81 Million For Metro Projects

President Obama's proposed FY13 budget includes $50 million for the Westside Subway Extension and $31 million for the Regional Connector Project. If approved by Congress later this year, the funds combined with Measure R revenue could jumpstart construction of both projects in 2013.

Metro Preparing For Expo Line

Metro is testing trains along the Expo Line corridor between downtown LA and Culver City in anticipation of opening the new line. Expo is the newest addition to the 70-station Metro Rail system. Trains are running on a schedule of every 12 minutes along the route to simulate regular service.

Work Scheduled For Wilshire Ramps To I-405

Construction will soon be underway to build new on-and off-ramps to the I-405 at Wilshire Boulevard as part of the I-405 Sepulveda Pass Improvements Project between the I-10 and US 101 freeways. The project adds a 10-mile HOV lane on the northbound I-405. For more information, visit metro.net/405.

Feds Approve Crenshaw Rail Line

The Federal Transit Administration has authorized Metro to go forward with the Crenshaw/LAX Transit Corridor project to construct a light rail line in the Crenshaw District, Inglewood and LAX areas. The 8.5-mile line along Crenshaw Boulevard will connect the Metro Green Line and the Expo Line.

real estate market as the reasons for exceeding the $60 per $100,000 per year limit, then I would say they don't have a legal excuse for doing that, because their projections weren't valid in the first place, but since they're holding themselves to the $60 ceiling and not using their faulty projections as an excuse for exceeding the ceiling, I don't think there are grounds for a lawsuit," Bittle said.

BHUSD is using unrealized projections as an excuse to raise the tax rate above $49.71.

Noting the last few years have not been the norm, Hsieh said, "It's very uncommon to have projections at 2 percent because school districts are growing at a lot more than 2 percent per year. Beverly Hills' long term averages are way higher than that."

Had assumptions been realized, Hsieh said, "the Measure E tax rate was supposed to be different every year because however the tax rate for Measure S and K changed, Measure E was supposed to fill in that change, so all three bonds combined were supposed to equal $49.71."

The tax rates for Measure S and K were projected to decline over the years based on property tax projections. Hsieh said he still expects the rate to eventually decline so the average tax rate will be $75 per $100,000 assessed value until Measure E is paid off in 2055.

Hsieh said the district recently refinanced $41.6 million of Measure S and K bonds in order to secure a lower interest rate, but the savings were not enough to dramatically lower the tax rate.

One of the reasons the district has cited for its bond troubles is bond interest rates are higher than had been anticipated. Although current issue bond interest rates have gone down, reflecting home mortgage interest rates, the interest rates of capital appreciation bonds have increased by 1.5 to 2 percent since the 2008 economic downturn, Hsieh said.

The way capital appreciation bonds work, Hsieh explained, is interest is deferred to a later date. With current interest bonds, interest is paid at six-month regular intervals.

"The real reason why we're so heavy on capital appreciation bonds now or would need to be is because there's no capacity in the tax rate if we want to issue bonds today," Hsieh said.

Part of the appeal of raising the tax rate would be the ability to issue more current issue bonds, Hsieh said.

"That will be a big help to this bond program overall," Hsieh said. "It will be overall lower cost, and although taxpayers might pay more today, over the life of the bond program, the total bill would be significantly lower."

Metro responds to City report, defends seismic studies

Metro issued a report earlier this week defending its geotechnical and seismic studies related to the Westside Subway Extension that recommend a subway alignment that would involve tunneling under Beverly High.

Metro's report responds to the Exponent peer review report of Metro's studies that was commissioned by the City of Beverly Hills and presented to the City Council in February.

In that report, Exponent stated, "It is Exponent's opinion that much more work needs to be performed to accurately identify, quantify, rank and mitigate the potential hazards posed by the proposed Westside Subway Extension Project before the definitive choice of one of the two presented alternatives or even potentially a third one can be made."

Metro's response to Exponent's report was prepared by Parsons Brinckerhoff, the same firm that worked on Metro's geotechnical and seismic reports that were released in October.

"Metro disagrees with Exponent's opinions and finds serious flaws in the conclusions drawn from its investigative approach," the report says. "In a number of cases, Exponent does not acknowledge or is unaware of information and analyses that Metro conducted. Moreover, Exponent's opinions frequently reflect a lack of familiarity with and expertise in underground construction and fault investigation, and are unsupported by facts."

Among other points, Metro challenges Exponent's concerns about the presence of methane gas near the Century City Constellation Boulevard station. Exponent suggested methane could present "at least as great a hazard to the public as the faulting hazards associated with the Santa Monica Boulevard station." Exponent recommended taking additional steps to quantify seismic and gas hazards at both potential station locations and considering "potential adjustments" to the proposed locations.

Metro's report said methane gas can be mitigated.

"Metro's engineering consultants have developed systems for mitigating and preventing gas inflows in the proposed stations along the Westside Subway Extension Project corridor using proven designs and construction procedures."

Metro's response was sent to Mayor Willie Brien, accompanied by a letter from Metro CEO Art Leahy.

"The Exponent report does not alter Metro's findings from last October, that tunneling can be safely accomplished along the Constellation alignment and under Beverly High and adjacent properties," Leahy wrote.

Brien said Wednesday afternoon the City is currently reviewing Metro's response.

"We believe they have not done what they need to do to show us how their data is accurate and ours is not in terms of active fault lines and how they would mitigate the methane issues," Brien said. "We believe they owe us additional information, data and science that is more detailed on the Santa Monica alignment, and they haven't done that."

Brien announced last week the City is in the process of selecting a legal counsel specializing in CEQA to assert the City's rights, protect its interests and pursue litigation if necessary related to the subway project. Brien said the liaison committee, which consists of Brien and Lili Bosse, is continuing the search, and the committee hopes to recommend a candidate for the City Council's consideration this Tuesday.

"We hope that it's done by Tuesday, but it's more important to get it right than to rush," Brien said.

The Metro board is considering the final EIR at a meeting April 26, and may vote on the subway alignment at that time. Metro's Planning and Programming Committee will review the final EIR April 18.

Christiansen restitution increased to $3.5 million

Los Angeles Superior Court Judge Stephen Marcus ordered former BHUSD Facilities Director Karen Christiansen last Friday to pay BHUSD $3.5 million in restitution, as part of her sentence following her four-count conflict-of-interest felony conviction last November.

The amount covers an approximately $2 million contract Christiansen negotiated between the BHUSD and her project management company Strategic Concepts, and approximately $1.5 million BHUSD spent on legal fees associated with Christiansen's case.

Deputy District Attorney Max Huntsman said he was satisfied with the ruling.

"We had told the judge all along we believed $1.5 million in attorney's fees should be ordered," Huntsman said. "We were glad the judge agreed with us. The amount is more than I believe she has, but it's important to have the record show how much money she owes BHUSD, so if she pursues a civil case against them any hypothetical recovery would have to be set against what she already owes them. What's important is that she stop victimizing the BHUSD. This pretty much assures that will happen."

Huntsman acknowledged, "you can't make people pay money they don't have," but he said restitution payment works like a civil judgment, in which Christiansen and the plaintiff will work out a payment plan.

Next month's Magbit Foundation Gala to feature Israeli singer Sarit Hadad

Sarit Hadad

The Magbit Foundation is celebrating the State of Israel's 64 years of independence with a performance by Israeli pop star Sarit Hadad and her band at the foundation's 23rd Annual Gala on May 6 at the Beverly Hilton Hotel.

Since 1995, the award-winning pop singer has released 20 albums, all of which have attained gold and platinum sales. The Israeli Music TV Channel named Hadad the best female singer of the decade in 2010. During the course of her career, Hadad has toured internationally, including stops in Los Angeles.

Cocktails will be served at 5:30 p.m.

followed by dinner at 7:30 p.m. in the International Ballroom. Dietary laws will be observed at the black tie event.

The Magbit Foundation was established in 1990 to promote university education in Israel. To accomplish this goal, Magbit established an interest-free loan program for needy and qualified students. The loan recipients repay the loans when they are financially able and loan repayments go directly to the student's university.

Sponsorship opportunities are available. For more information or to purchase tickets, visit magbit.org or call (310) 273-2233.

City retains New York marketing agency for 100th anniversary

The City has retained The Argus Group, a New York-based marketing agency, to sign up corporate sponsors and develop a high-profile host committee for the City of Beverly Hills' 100th anniversary celebration.

The City is planning an 18-month celebration beginning in mid-2013 that will continue throughout 2014. The official anniversary date is Jan. 28, 2014.

The City Council voted 4-1 April 3 to approve the one-year, $120,000 contract.

Councilmember Lili Bosse, who serves on the 100th Anniversary Celebration Committee with Councilmember Barry Brucker, called the agreement with Argus a "smart investment." Dick Rosenzweig, recently retired Playboy executive, chairs the committee.

"We want to do something that is global that will reach all over the world," Bosse said. "My goal is people are going to choose to come to Beverly Hills during that year, just like people travel to wherever the Olympics are because they want to be part of an event.

This will be [more than] a year-long event for our city, so this group is used to doing something on that kind of a scale. They have the relationships, they know the type of brand that Beverly Hills is, and could entice those kinds of companies to be sponsors and help support this event."

Vice Mayor John Mirisch voted no, because he objected to Argus receiving both a monthly $10,000 retainer payment and 20-percent commission on sponsorships it secures, including on the fair market value of in-kind donations.

"To me it seems like double dipping [to receive a retainer and commission]," Mirisch said. "In principal, I have an issue with that. I'm not calling into question their skills or talents or that they're good. I like the model if they get the deals done, they get rewarded; if they don't, they don't."

Mirisch pointed out that William Morris Endeavor, with which the City has a licensing agreement, works on commission only.

Deputy City Manager Cheryl Friedling explained the City was agreeing to a higher commission rate than Argus' initial proposal of 10 percent because Argus initially proposed a higher retainer rate of $30,000 per month.

Friedling said the City has told Argus the expectation is to focus on cash donations, and any offers of in-kind donations will be reviewed by the anniversary committee. She said Argus would not be compensated for any sponsorships or donations it is not responsible for securing.

The City has already allocated $250,000 from the current year's tourism and marketing budget, which comes from the transient occupancy tax, toward the anniversary celebration. The City plans to allocate the same amount over the next two years for a total of $750,000.

The Argus Group has relationships with prominent corporations, philanthropic leaders and celebrities, Friedling explained. When Argus worked with Mexico for its bicentennial celebration, it secured Bill Clinton, Salma Hayek, and Placido Domingo for its Host Committee, which can improve visibility and brand recognition for the City, Friedling said.

Bosse said the 100th Anniversary Committee would be meeting with Argus in the coming weeks to develop a plan for executing the celebration.

Traffic and Parking Commission recommends all-way stop at Carla Ridge and Arkell Drive

The Traffic and Parking Commission voted unanimously April 5 to recommend the addition of a two-way stop sign at Carla Ridge and Arkell Drive to make the intersection an all-way stop.

Stop signs facing eastbound and westbound traffic on Arkell Drive at Carla Ridge currently exist, but the Commission recommended installing stop signs facing northbound and southbound traffic on Carla Ridge to address visibility issues at the intersection.

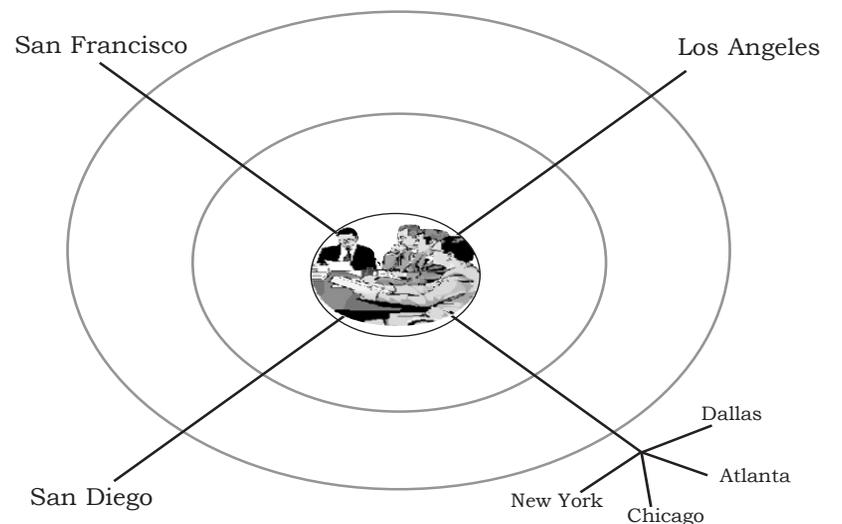

Deputy Director of Transportation Aaron Kunz said the City's Transportation Department investigated the site at a resident's request and determined there was a right-of-way visibility issue at the intersection, meaning, "if there's a two-way stop,

City and state

And a responsible press

By Rudy Cole

Want a reminder of how much we should appreciate city staff and former lawmakers? Often, when hearing the voices of doom and gloom, I wonder if we are living in the same city or even world.

Just take a short trip outside our boundaries and look at signage on every street and business, as one example of how different and protective we are compared to others around us.

I spotted an eye-level, bright yellow small billboard advertising the services of lawyers who specialize in drunk driving cases, close enough to the sidewalk to touch. It was ugly and intrusive, and on Pico Boulevard just a few blocks from our border.

Even though we have strict rules on signage and most need approval by the Architectural Commission, we cannot protect the look and feel of our community if we continue to cut staff in code enforcement or inspectors in building and safety. Most often, merchants violate laws and fail to obtain permits because they have not been properly informed.

We need to continually support the work of city staffers responsible for aesthetics and safety in the same manner we back law enforcement and fire fighters. And, equally important, appreciate what we have accomplished with our ordinances and the spirit of ethical and professional service by city workers.

NOTES ON AN ELECTION

Not exactly sure who to blame: probably a combination of ballot measures and the state legislature, but we are about to enter a very weird election cycle in state assembly races.

Under current laws, the top two candidates in a primary election face each other in a November final, regardless of party affiliation. That makes some sense in districts that have either a large Republican or Democratic Party registration, as ours does.

However, what is not rational is the new law that mandates a run-off even if one candidate receives more than a majority in the primary.

Conceivably, the leader in the primary could win with nearly 100 percent of the vote and still face a final campaign. Obtaining a simple majority, not plurality, should be sufficient to have a winner.

Elections are costly, for candidates and the taxpayers. If a candidate manages a majority in the primary where all candidates, regardless of party, appear on the same ballot list, that should constitute a win.

Our own new district has some other problems. Although the candidates are campaigning by the rules, the incumbent designation does become confusing when there are new districts or a current office holder moves into another district, as has happened in ours.

With a citizen committee redrawing the election maps for congress and the state legislature, we now find ourselves in the same assembly district as Santa Monica, just one example of the modifications now in place.

Term limits also forced out our very able and highly regarded State Assemblymember Mike Feuer, opening up a very inviting and reasonably "safe" Democratic district for a new candidate.

But redistricting also placed two strong Democrats in the same bay area assembly district leading to one incumbent, Betsy Butler, moving into our 50th district.

Here's the problem: Butler will now appear on the ballot as a member of the legislature, giving voters the impression she is an incumbent representing the new district. Butler has done nothing wrong, but the rules and laws need to be changed to clearly identify incumbents or the lack of one, which is true in our district.

It does give Butler an unfair advantage in a district that traditionally supports incumbents.

On the Democratic side, Butler is in a very tough race with Torie Osborn who secured many early endorsements from Democratic clubs, and political and civic leaders. Santa Monica Mayor Richard Bloom could be a spoiler—he has won elections in his city, now a large voting bloc in the district.

As for the lone Republican in the race, Brad Torgan, he will need a very split and close Democratic vote to come in second. Torgan is liberal on social issues, but supports more conservative Republican positions on fiscal and tax matters. He has the support of school board member Lisa Korbatov, a Republican activist.

Qualifications and endorsers aside, our district has never elected a woman to the legislature. This could be the year we change that and make an effort to balance gender representation.

Actual incumbency is not the only problem facing election officials when approving an occupation for candidates. Los Angeles City Attorney Carmen Trutanich, a candidate for District Attorney, tried to stretch his credentials by extending his job title to "Los Angeles Chief Prosecutor" but a judge smacked that down.

For many voters, the job he has and the one he wants are hard to separate, without the added attempt at ballot enhancement. The City Attorney is the top legal officer for the city and the District Attorney for the county. The City Attorney prosecutes most misdemeanors while the DA does felonies and some misdemeanors. Clearly, the DA is the top law enforcement officer, and prosecutor, in the County.

More important, the Los Angeles City Attorney is the legal advisor for all city departments, including the council and mayor, and most of this has nothing to do with law enforcement. Conversely, the District Attorney is almost entirely a criminal prosecution office.

Although there are a number of eager and active candidates in this race, clearly the most qualified is Chief Deputy District Attorney Jackie Lacey. She has avoided much of the nasty infighting among the candidates and is running entirely on her record as a professional, experienced law enforcement official.

Lacey has the strong backing and endorsement of her boss, District Attorney Steve Cooley. Incidentally, Cooley was the only Republican to carry Beverly Hills in the last state election, when he was a contender for Attorney General. His decision not to seek another term opened up an opportunity for Lacey and other deputies in his office.

Cooley has had the opportunity to watch the careers of the assistants in his office. His choice of Lacey to succeed him could make the difference in this election.

It was not all that smart for Trutanich to try to stretch the rules to gain a political advantage. We would hope that candidates for the largely non-partisan District Attorney's office would play strictly according to the rule of law.

It does remind me of a campaign for the non-partisan office of County Supervisor in a bay area district many years ago. Candidates for supervisor and other municipal and city offices are barred by law from using political party identifications on the ballot.

In that election, one candidate tried hard to win votes by pointing out he was the only Democrat in the race. When all else failed, he went to court to have his middle name changed to "Democrat." He lost the battle with the courts and the County election officials, and the campaign.

Newspapers have a very special responsibility to use First Amendment protections wisely and fairly, and that includes separating opinion from news. This column is opinion, my own, and not necessarily those of the publisher.

Josh Gross and I agree on many issues, but we also differ strongly on matters involving our schools, as one example. But our publisher has never, ever attempted to influence or alter my views, nor with stories by staff reporters.

Using news stories to express personal interests and private wars detracts from professional standards we demand from a free press. If it is opinion, simply label it that way, don't try to pass it off as news.

Outside of Beverly Hills, I found a good example of news slanting and management. The right wing Washington Times recently used this headline:

"UN Demands Reparations for Trayvon."

Not quite. A minor official inside the United Nations, who works for the human rights division, called for the shooter to be put on trial and reparations considered for the family. This view is not too far from what most people following the terrible tragedy in Florida are advocating, but it is hardly a matter the United Nations has even considered.

SCHOOL BOARD AND BOND TAXES

Can the school board legally or morally raise taxes for bond sales under Measure E? Promises were made in the bond election, which passed overwhelmingly, that must be honored, no matter how inconvenient.

Since I had a personal role as manager of the campaign and obtained endorsements based on the pledges made, I will limit most of my comments in a letter to the board. But for now, although this board has only one remaining member who served during the election, keeping faith with the voters could well impact approval of any future bond election.

Cultural Heritage Commission introduced at City Council meeting

Mayor Willie Brien introduced the City's new Cultural Heritage Commission April 3. The Cultural Heritage Commission was established to maintain the City's register of historic places, make recommendations on properties eligible for the Mills Act and historic landmark status, review alteration and demolition applications, and oversee any subsequent historic resource surveys.

when you're approaching it you might not see [traffic] coming from the other direction," Kunz said.

Kunz called the recommendation to install the stop signs a "proactive measure," since the intersection does not have a "major accident history." The City Council is scheduled to consider the matter on May 15.

The Traffic and Parking Commission also voted unanimously to establish a permit parking zone on the 700 block of North Doheny Drive, north of Santa Monica Boulevard. The 600 and 800 blocks of North Doheny already have evening parking restrictions, which were implemented in response to parking encroachment from nearby West Hollywood businesses and restaurants, Kunz said.

Kunz said 66 percent of residents, or 10 of 15 households, on the block signed a resident initiated petition to establish a parking zone limiting parking to two hours, 8 a.m. to 7 p.m. daily, and no parking 7 p.m. to 2:30 a.m. daily, except by Permit O.

The City Council will consider the matter next Tuesday.

"Both those projects made a tremendous amount of sense," Vice Chair Alan Grushcow said. "The Carla Ridge project is a public safety issue. The parking matter on Doheny was clearly an abuse of [Beverly Hills] residents' parking by the West Hollywood commercial district, so we feel the residents were due relief on that particular block."

Commission Chair Julie Steinberg was out of town and not available for comment.

Be prepared: City hosts Community Disaster Summit April 30

Calling all businesses and community organizations: The City of Beverly Hills is hosting a free community disaster summit April 30 from 8:30 a.m. to noon to help the business community prepare, respond and recover from a disaster.

"We've called it 'Preparing Our Community: Seeking Solutions and Sharing Strengths,'" Health and Safety Commission Chair Debra Judelson said. "The purpose of this is to do an outreach to the business community so that they know what they need to do in advance so if an emergency occurs, they have prepared for and reduced the risk of any complications, as well as learning how to respond and recover from a disaster."

The half-day program hosted in City Hall's Municipal Gallery will feature panel discussions and breakout sessions, including helping organizations create their own disaster plans. The day will begin with a welcome address from Mayor Willie Brien, introductions by Judelson, and a presentation of the city's disaster response plan and expectations by Director of Emergency Management Pamela Mottice Muller.

Discussion topics include how to make your business safer before an earthquake, and a presentation from Southern California Edison about what to expect from power utilities in the event of a disaster.

"We're going to actually walk people through how to write their disaster response plans," Judelson said. "We're [working] with schools, faith- and community-based organizations, as well as senior housing and any group that needs to be able to prepare, respond and recover from a disaster. We're also going to share partnership information between our city and stakeholders."

Free parking is available in the Civic Center parking structure, and a complimentary continental breakfast will be provided.

BUILDING CHARACTER

The Weekly's exclusive interview with Design Review Commission Chair Arline Pepp
By Melanie Anderson

How did you end up in Beverly Hills?

We were living in Cheviot Hills [but] my husband [Buddy] grew up in Beverly Hills. He was adamant when our kids started kindergarten that we should be in Beverly Hills because he felt [BHUSD] was such a fine school district. So we stretched and we bought our house so our eldest daughter could start kindergarten, and we have stayed in the same house ever since.

How did you and your husband meet?

You're asking the same questions as [last week's] interview with [Fine Art Commission Chair Terri Smooke in Issue #653.] It's scary. She went to the same four schools I went to: Castle Heights, Palms, Hamilton High, and UCLA. And she was fixed up with her husband on a blind date. So was I. Our fathers fixed us up. They were members of the same club and they were chatting as they played golf. My father-in-law said to my father, "Can my son call [your daughter]?" He said sure, so he gives his son the phone number whereupon my husband Buddy stuffs it in the back of a drawer because he had a girlfriend at the time. [Some time later] he needed a date for an engagement party of a friend, so he and his friend flipped a coin to see who was going to call me. I tell his best friend—he's our dear friend to this day—that he was the loser.

You serve on the Friends of Greystone board. Tell us what's new at Greystone.

What's new is the commercial kitchen [that will allow Greystone to host] more events. The heating and air conditioning was also just redone by the City, which is fabulous. I think the Concours [d'Elegance] is a spectacular event, which is May 6 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. It shows off the house, the City, and it's so genteel and so elegant. It's an all-inclusive day.

How did you become involved with Greystone?

I always have liked architecture and historical buildings. I had been on Team Beverly Hills. There was a notice there was an opening for a board position on Friends of Greystone. It's a wonderful group of people, so I joined in 2006. I love the design showcase houses. Cindy Brynan, who runs all these events for the City, is phenomenal. I admire her energy and her exactness.

How did you get into architecture and design?

My very first job out of college was for a big architectural firm. I only lasted a short while because I got pregnant. I worked with an architect for about 20 years and he designed residences in Beverly Hills primarily. I worked doing interiors for him. I was self-taught, no schooling in design, but I worked with him for years. I've also done my own jobs independently [including] homes and condos in Beverly Hills and Los Angeles.

What's your comment that Beverly Hills recently passed its own historic preservation ordinance?

I am beyond thrilled that they have a preservation clause. I'd like them to continue going further and enhancing their ordinance. I think unfortunately because everyone is so busy in the city, that we are reactive in many ways instead of proactive. I much prefer to be proactive. The good news is the preservation ordinance came to being because of the [Richard] Neutra house and it was going to be torn down, and that would not be okay.

Another example of the proactive versus reactive is there's an ordinance before the Planning Commission coming up about fences. I have no problem with discussing it but it's piecemeal because there was a resident that had a problem. I prefer to be proactive. Let's look at the residential codes and see if they need to be enhanced. I'm going to try to meet with the liaison with the city council so we can get this moving.

You call yourself an "avid speedwalker." Where's your favorite place to walk in Beverly Hills?

I walk in the residential areas and I can check out all of the homes. This morning I'm walking and I hear this lady screaming. I didn't think it had anything to do with me. She keeps screaming, so I turn around and I say, "Is everything okay?" She comes up to me and says, "I've seen you walk for so many years and I wanted to say hello." I've been doing this for 47 years at least. I take different routes to see some of the projects that are being constructed now. I walk to pilates, too.

How did you get involved with the Design Review Commission?

I've always had a love of good architecture. I was on the Architectural Commission for eight years and I was chair and I enjoyed it tremendously. I think our city has such special character that I would like to see it maintained. When the opening for the Design Review Commission came up, a few people contacted me and asked if I would be interested in participating. At first I wasn't so sure but I'm very pleased with my decision. The reason I wasn't so sure is a man's home is his castle. You're no longer dealing with contractors and architects; you're dealing with architects and homeowners, and they're emotionally involved. I wasn't sure how that was going to work. But what I am seeing on the commission, it's very professional. We have a fabulous architect on it, [John Wyka]. The former chair [Howard Szabo] is a real estate attorney, and was a judge. He's so fair, so balanced. We have [Susan Strauss] who was a Fine Art Commissioner and has an art background, and [Vice Chair Ilene Nathan] has been before design review commissions and is familiar with the building process. Everybody brings something different to the table. I'm very, very pleased with the commission as it is now working.

What I have tried to do on the commission is make sure that we look at what our guidelines and criteria are so every project is treated the same. There are five guidelines: internal compatibility with the design scheme; minimizes appearance of scale and mass, and enhances the garden-like quality of the city; enhances the appearance of the neighborhood; reasonable expectation of privacy for the neighbors; and it respects prevailing site design pattern and integrates harmony between the old and the new home.

When we go through our critiquing [for each project], [we] go point [by] point [by] point. It's very professional. I'm not being personal with anybody. I think that seems to be working very well.

What are the differences between the Design Review Commission and the Architectural Commission?

You're almost hitting on a hot button because a merger between the Architectural Commission and the Design Review Commission [has been proposed by the City's Government Efficiency Task Force]. I think the commissions are very different. There are all different rules and regulations. The Design Review Commission is a little more personal, a little more emotional. The Architectural Commission is really getting the best product visually for the city and working of course diplomatically but not with emotions necessarily. [Design Review Commission handles single-family homes; Architectural Commission handles businesses, multi-family dwellings and signage in the City.] What they're suggesting is a super commission, if you will, which would combine both of these.

I see many difficulties. [One] of the most outstanding difficulties would be you limit how many citizens are involved in your city government. You're taking away five citizens that wish to be involved. The other problem is they would meet twice a month. As of now the commissions meet once a month. It is legislated you shall have an architect as well as a landscape designer [on the commission]. You're asking professional people to donate twice as much time, which I think is problematic. Furthermore I feel that putting the two commissions together doesn't save any time. The same amount of prep work is necessary prior to presentation. It's the same if the Architectural Commission is meeting and the Design Review Commission is meeting. We canceled our meeting this week because there aren't enough projects. We had one project, but [the applicant] withdrew it. I think it's a sign of the economy and when the economy picks up, the Architectural Commission will be jammed. They're jammed now. I think as the economy improves, [project applications will increase].

What about the argument that overall, the consistency of the look of Beverly Hills might improve if the same commissioners review both types of projects?

Good design is good design is good design. If you have an architectural commission and they have the sense of good design, then all of the projects will have good design and the same with the Design Review Commission. They're also hiring an urban planner. Now that might help out as well.

What projects come before the Design Review Commission?

The purview of the Design Review Commission is homes that do not fit in a "pure design," which is in a book that is put out by the City. It indicates what the windows should look like, the roofing materials, the façade materials. It is a cohesive picture of a Cape Cod, colonial, Mediterranean [style home]. Those projects do not come before the Design Review Commission; those are approved by staff. The projects that come before the Design Review Commission are hybrids if you will; there's no pure design. The issue we face is finding are the elements compatible? Is the house trying to say something? Many times we need to work on that because there's not a clear feeling of the house.

How does your background as an interior designer influence your decisions on the commission?

Remember we talked about good design is good design is good design? I feel I am educated in proportion, scale, mass from my background. Whether it's doing the interior of a house or the exterior, I think you have the same sense of balance and proportion.

Tell us about your goals this year as chair.

[The purview of the Design Review Commission] is restricted. It's not the hillside, mostly not north of sunset. I would like to extend the purview to the entire city. When [the City is] talking about [wanting] uniformity of good design, that would be uniformity of good design. Why should a portion of the city be well designed and another portion have no restrictions?

I would like to have the basement count in some formula toward the square footage of the home. I'm not saying it has to be foot for foot [but] to have the basement count toward the FAR [floor area ratio so] maybe some of the bulk would go underground. I'm not against basements, but I think if you have a basement then you want to encourage setbacks and smaller aboveground properties. I think it also controls energy use. With big basements they're using more energy, it controls the number of people in the dwelling, and it would reduce the visible square footage.

My other goal would be to require a garage, not just a carport. I feel there are too many cars parking in front of too many houses. People don't have one or two cars any more—they have five—and they're all in front of the home.

There's a camera in the commission room and it focuses straight ahead on us, but people [watching the video] can't see the project [presentations]. They need to put another camera in so the project can be viewed by the audience. I think that would be tremendously helpful.

If somebody's applied for a permit, I think it would be nice to have a rendering of what the project's going to look like on the fence [or a scannable barcode for smartphones] to let neighbors know prior to getting approved. The rule now is [if you are within] 100 feet [of the project] you have to be notified. That's like one house on either side of you but it's not taking the whole complexion of the block into consideration.

We work with the Architectural Commission to give out design awards. We're going to give out a preservation award. These would be projects that have had their façades remodeled to maintain the character. Two of them on my block just now have been completed. It gives you such a fabulous feeling to see the house painted fresh [with] new staining around the windows, but all the openings are the same. I love keeping the original architecture of the neighborhood.

[A fellow commissioner pointed out an article in the April 6 edition of The Hollywood Reporter entitled "L.A.'s Love/Hate for 'Persian Palaces'" that said, "the city's Design Review Commission effectively banned Persian palace construction by enforcing new restrictions on over-the-top ornamentation. Those still devoted to building 'classic' Persian palaces have drifted to an adjacent tract known as Beverly Hills Post Office, located in L.A. and thus outside the Design Review Commission's reach."]

I'm very proud the Design Review Commission is performing its function correctly because we do not want overly built and highly ornamented homes. We want to maintain the charming character of our city. And our motto is less is more.

In Issue #609, retired Commissioner Gary Gilbar told the Weekly, "When someone builds a house in the city, that house will be there long after they leave. A house or a store is an asset to the community and therefore the community needs to ask them to do something which is compatible with the community." Do you agree?

That's exactly what I've been talking about, maintaining the character of the city. When I gave you those five criteria for the Design Review Commission, it addresses those things. We look at streetscape; streetscape is terribly important. As part of the application process, now it is required to submit photographs of lots of houses on the street so you can see: is it compatible? Does [the new design] fit in? I think you can have different styles—my street has several different styles—but they're all of the same size, they all feel they have been there forever. It's true that we're leaving a legacy. We moved to the city for the schools and the park-like quality, and we don't want to lose that. When [applicants] come before the commission we want to have a lot of landscaping. We encourage large box trees. We want the house to settle into the neighborhood.

Your husband Buddy Pepp is executive director of the Petersen Automotive Museum. Do you share his passion for cars?

Our very first date was in a 1948 Lincoln

Continental convertible, so I knew what I was in for. He loves cars, and I think it's a wonderful hobby.

Tell us about the rest of your family.

We have three daughters whom I love and adore. [All three attended BHUSD K-12.] Our oldest daughter is Dana. She's divorced and has a 16-year-old daughter Lexi and a 14-year-old son Cole. Dana's job for many years was overseeing the First 5 program in the Canal Area [of Marin County]. Now she is consulting and doing team building and goal orientation [programs] for private and not-for-profit [companies]. [Our second] daughter Lara is married to Steve Rajninger. He's a wonderful architect [so] we have nice discussions. Lara started her own non-profit, which lasted for a few years and then she got pregnant with twins, Tomi and Jericho, who are [almost] 12. Now she's working with a school district [in Marin]. Our third daughter, Denise, is married to Jon Wank and they have 7-year-old twins, Kallen and Lainey. Denise was director of marketing for a 16-chain restaurant for five or six years in Sonoma. She's now doing some consulting and marketing independently. Her husband is president of Skadaddle Media.

What's the significance all three of your daughters ended up in Northern California?

A mother's fondest dream is for her children to be close and they all ended up in Northern California after going to school there. I wasn't there to say, "Did you talk to your sister?" They did it by themselves, and my niece is up there as well. They have a really nice relationship. They go to each other's events for the kids. They really help each other. It's my fondest wish come true. I'm enjoying my ride. I've loved my experiences.

Beverly Wilshire Hotel General Manager Ben Trodd

You've been on the job about six months. How's that going?

It's going wonderfully. Coming back to L.A. is really coming back home for me in this country. We lived here before [from 2005 to 2008 when] I was the hotel manager of the Four Seasons in Los Angeles. When I first joined the company, I dreamt of having the opportunity to one day be the general manager of the Beverly Wilshire. It's a great honor to be allowed to run this great hotel. It's a big property with a fantastic, iconic reputation in the world. I feel a great sense of responsibility but it's going very, very well.

Your predecessor, Radha Arora, went on to Rosewood Hotels and Resorts in Dallas. What advice did he share with you before his departure?

I took a lot of advice from many people in the company [including Arora]. Obviously I had some great experience being in the city beforehand. Ultimately, Four Seasons' standards as far as how we treat our people is what makes our business successful. All of the advice I took is based around that and making sure we continue to create great memories for people who come to stay here. This is a hotel that many people have dreamed about staying in for a long time. They put a lot of value into the time they spend in the building. In other cases, there are regular guests who have been coming to the hotel for 30 to 40 years.

What are some of your priorities for the Beverly Wilshire?

I think to continue to establish the hotel, we have to continue to change and evolve. We have two fantastic restaurants here [Cut and The Blvd]. We want to continue to make those a massive part of the local community, as well as part of the hotel guests' [experience]. Blvd is a hugely successful restaurant here that's very much a shop window for our hotel in the city. It's a place where many business deals are conducted and many special occasions happen. The focus is on both the local community, and evolving the product to make sure we are part of that community, and evolving the room product to really meet the needs of what [are] truly changing guests. Our guests have very specific ideas now.

We have 395 guests and it's about making sure that every single guest feels we're creating an individual product oriented toward them and their needs. [Our goal is] to continue to create the impression that we're looking after them as an individual, that we get them, that we understand them, and we know how to add some value to their stays. That might be for some people very efficient timing, because they're under a very strict schedule. For other people it might be being able to conform to a particularly demanding diet that has many special requests within it. For certain other people it might just be making sure they have their exact favorite room in their favorite color scheme in their favorite location in the building because that makes them feel most comfortable and productive when they're here.

The wonderful thing about the hotel obviously is it has an iconic location. It's part of so many different communities: it's part of the entertainment community, it's part of the tourism community, it's part of the local residential community. It has so many things going on in so many different places. Also having a ballroom that can [host] some of the most prestigious events the community has. That also brings a lot of people into the hotel.

The Beverly Wilshire has had some labor problems in the past, such as a local unit boycotting and picketing in 2005. What are you doing to address this?

I'm not sure that the picketing you're mentioning [was] actually oriented toward the Beverly Wilshire. I'm aware of what you're alluding to, but it wasn't actually local to this hotel. I think there was a labor dispute [related] to construction of another Four Seasons hotel somewhere else. But obviously Four Seasons doesn't do the construction.

When I first transferred here, I was met by one of the guys in room service. I said to him, "Tell me your story." He said, "Well, I started here in 1977..." To hear something like that is very humbling. We have many staff [members] like that. We have a fantastic dedicated staff here who have been involved with the hotel and have had ownership with the hotel long before Four Seasons was involved, certainly long before I've been here, also longer than I've been with the company in my 17 years. It's a great group of staff, and [there is] a huge passion for the hotel. We use our staff as wonderful idea sources. They frequently come to me and tell me how they think the guest stay can be improved. I think using that wonderful ownership they take and wonderful involvement helps to create a great environment for everybody. Ultimately our golden rule at Four Seasons as a company is to treat people how we would like to be treated, which applies to guests and applies to staff equally. Following that really does help us [provide] a good working environment for everybody.

How did you get into the hospitality business?

I got into the hospitality business while I was at college. I was studying in London and worked in hotels and restaurants. The bug just bit at that point. I've always traveled a lot and I've loved being in and around hotels. I joined the [Four Seasons] company in '95 in London.

Most recently, you were GM at the Four Seasons Seattle. How is running a hotel in Beverly Hills different from running a hotel in Seattle?

It's certainly different [although] the principles of hospitality are very similar. Obviously this hotel is larger and doesn't have a residential element to it. My last hotel had a residential community that we managed. Outside of that, the business makes it very diverse here. That's certainly the biggest difference. But at the same time, when you work for a company with a brand and image as strong as Four Seasons, people's expectations when they arrive [at] any Four Seasons hotel are very similar.

There's certainly a little bit more of a European flavor to tourism that comes to Beverly Hills. Seattle has a lot of cruise ship oriented tourism during the summer period, and the winter becomes more of a city hotel, more of a business hotel. [In Beverly Hills] summer is a little bit busier [but] tourism takes place throughout the whole year.

You grew up in the United Kingdom and began your Four Seasons career in London. How did you end up in the United States?

I worked in lots of different Four Seasons hotels in lots of different roles. My journey was from London to Dublin. I then worked in Lisbon in Portugal and Riyadh in Saudi Arabia for different periods of time. Then back to the United Kingdom to Hampshire to open a resort for Four Seasons. I moved to the United States in 2005, and opened the Four Seasons in Palo Alto in Northern California. I moved to Los Angeles very soon after that, and then up to Seattle and back to L.A.

I always loved visiting L.A. I came here on a business trip in 1995 and stayed in [the Beverly Wilshire] and sent a postcard to my then-girlfriend who is now my wife, and wrote on it, "I think we'd love to live here one day." Occasionally, things do work out how you expected them to. I guess I was destined to come here. At the beginning of my career, nearly all of our hotels were in North America, so I would say it was probably always an aim of mine to come to where the company is based. Now we have over 80 hotels, and we're very much worldwide, but we had less than half of that when I joined the company.

So you've seen a lot of growth in 17 years.

It's been an amazing journey as I've watched the company grow [on] a macro scale. Yet from a cultural perspective, we're still very much the same company. Many people are still here that were around at that time. Our values as a company are still so strong. It's still relatively a small company where we all know each other.

Tell us about your family.

I have three children [Ella, Molly and Joshua] that are 11, 8 and 2. My three children were born in three different countries. I have one that was born in England, one that was born in Ireland and one that was born in the U.S. We live in Manhattan Beach. At the moment [my wife Laura] looks after all the children. Prior to that she worked in the hotel business [for Four Seasons] as well.

What do you like to do in your free time?

I'm a keen runner. I like to run particularly by the beach where I live. I play a lot of different sports. I love playing golf. I love what I call football and you call soccer. I've been able to coach my daughters' soccer teams as well. It's been nice to be able to do that.

What's the best part about working in Beverly Hills?

I think it really is to be in the center of everything, to be a part of the fulcrum of the City. You really feel the different businesses that drive the great community that we have here in Beverly Hills. I feel like I'm in one of the shop windows in this hotel. You see so much of the City evolving around you every day. The energy is fantastic. I love the cosmopolitan nature of Beverly Hills. I love the fact that we are both a tourism and business mecca for everybody throughout the world.

You will be bidding on a lien, not on a property itself. Placing the highest bid at a trustee auction does not automatically entitle you to free and clear ownership of the property. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on the property. NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER The sale date shown on this notice of sale may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code. The law requires that information about trustee sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale. To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors, and persons who may otherwise be interested in the will or estate, or both, of RUTH FAIERMAN A PETITION FOR PROBATE has been filed by Sarah Bailey Gyer in the Superior Court of California, County of LOS ANGELES.

THE PETITION FOR PROBATE requests that Sarah Bailey Gyer be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.

THE PETITION requests the decedent's will and codicils, if any, be admitted to probate. The will and any codicils are available for examination in the file kept by the court.

THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.

A HEARING on the petition will be held on May 1, 2012 at 8:30 AM in Dept. No. 5 located at 111 N. Hill St., Los Angeles, CA 90012.

IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the deceased, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within four months from the date of first issuance of letters as provided in Probate Code section 9100. The time for filing claims will not expire before four months from the hearing date noticed above.

YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk. Attorney for petitioner: HARCOURT HERVEY III ESQ SBN 55728 2120 HUNTINGTON DR SOUTH PASADENA CA 91030
