“Rename South Santa Monica Boulevard” [Letter, Issue 708]

I can understand Mr. Barman’s reasons for wanting to change the street’s name back to Burton Way – to restore its original name; to honor Burton E. Green; to help eliminate confusion about the two Santa Monica Boulevards; and to eliminate the name of another city being prominently featured in Beverly Hills. However, these are not good enough reasons for a name change.

In 1986, a few Beverly Hills business owners wanted to change the name of South Santa Monica Boulevard, to eliminate confusion for customers visiting Beverly Hills for the first time. The Beverly Hills Planning Commission sent a poll to local business owners with choices of new names (including New Burton Way). “The response has been almost unanimously opposed to change,” according to Allan Alexander, then chairman of the Planning Commission. The name-change proposal was dropped. (“What’s in a Name?: Idea of Change Is a Big Deal on Little Santa Monica Blvd.,” Los Angeles Times, July 3, 1986)

Regarding the confusion issue, changing the street’s name at this point would create more confusion than it would solve. I remember the nickname “Little Santa Monica” from when I was a young child in the early 1960s (I am a 52-year resident of the City). People who have been familiar with the two Santa Monica Boulevards for decades would be hopelessly confused. If they were given an address that used to be on South Santa Monica, but was now on Burton Way, they would be looking for it only on the Burton Way that has existed for decades. A name change might be helpful to people coming to this area for the first time, but they could still be confused, because the two Santa Monica Boulevards continue outside the border of Beverly Hills, westward through a portion of west Los Angeles. I suspect that the name change was done many decades ago to eliminate confusion.

Regarding a street named after another city being a “wrong image” – as a single street, Santa Monica Boulevard runs eastward through the City of West Hollywood and the iconic Los Angeles neighborhood of Hollywood. I haven’t heard any complaints about the street name from people in those areas. In fact, when Santa Monica Boulevard in West Hollywood was named a “Great Street for 2011” by the American Planning Association, West Hollywood Mayor John Duran said he was proud that the three major streets in the City, Santa Monica Boulevard, Sunset Boulevard, and Melrose Avenue, “are featured and immortalized in film, television, and song.” (Los Angeles Times, October 4, 2011)

I suggest that if Mr. Barman would like to honor Burton E. Green in a location near South Santa Monica Boulevard, some kind of monument could be placed in the nearby Beverly Gardens Park. However, any funds

“Beverly High ranked in top high schools in state” [Issue 708]

The article about Beverly Hills High School being ranked in top high schools in state had a positive spin on the fact the Beverly Hills High School was ranked 85th in the state. I am unclear as to why this ranking should be a cause for celebration rather than a cause for concern for our school and community. In looking at the US News and World Report, it is clear that our school district should not be cheering this accomplishment but rather working on a serious approach for improvement. There were 12 Los Angeles Unified School District high schools ranked higher than Beverly including rankings at numbers 14, 15, 17, 21, 26, etc. If that fact alone was not enough, the following school districts had a high school that placed above Beverly in the state high school ranking: La Canada, Palos Verdes Peninsula, San Marino, El Segundo, Glendale, Malibu, South Pasadena, and Manhattan Beach. Beverly Hills schools used to be the ‘gold standard’ for schools and that fact was a huge draw for families to move into our community. Based upon this US News and World Report, that would not seem to be the case now.

Beverly High’s Building A to be saved, Konheim Athletic Building to be demolished

Konheim Athletic Building, scheduled to be demolished

Beverly High’s historic Building B and the late 1960’s era building A will undergo major renovation under the latest consensus reached by the Board of Education on Tuesday night.

DLR architects presented the Board with a three-dimensional model with movable pieces to help the board reach consensus on undecided areas of the high school.

The Board agreed to not demolish Building A, which was opened in 1969, which includes the planetarium, library and Theatre 40. The planetarium will not be demolished and classroom space would be consistent with current class sizes at 900 square feet. The projected estimated cost of a major renovation of A, which would include the installation of an atrium over the open patio on the third floor, is $43.7 million.

Work on Building A would include refurbishing every classroom, replacing the exterior windows, installing new ceiling tiles and new lighting. Space outside of the classrooms would be reconfigured into different areas and possibly additional classroom space. The third floor patio, currently an open space, would become enclosed, so that the space would be temperature conditioned and have light after hours and could accommodate more activity space, according to consultant Tim Buresh.

Preliminary discussions included moving the library from Building A to Building B. Building B would also be the centralized location of the school’s administration.

Major renovation of Building B and a light renovation of Salter Theatre is projected to cost $16.4 million. The walking bridges between A and B, which currently houses the principal’s office and conference room, would be demolished. The Board agreed to allocate $1 million to the renovation of the swim gym.

The Konheim Athletic Building will be demolished, which will allow for a regulation size running track and fields. One of the questions posed by Andrea Cohen Gehring, a principal at DLR architects, was whether the new athletic building will have a basketball court on the roof or whether an outdoor basketball court would be placed elsewhere.

Four board members supported expanding the indoor basketball courts inside the new athletic building, proposed to be built where Beverly High’s tennis courts are currently located, from three to four courts instead of a basketball court on a rooftop. An extra basketball court is an estimated cost of $2.5 million. The new athletic building is estimated to cost $28 million. These decisions put the school total at over $150 million.

Working within the $180 million budget previously agreed upon for the high school, the Board was left to decide where new parking would be installed and how many spaces would be needed, such as under the football field, under the new athletic building, or under the iconic front lawn.

Board President Jake Manaster and members Lewis Hall and Lisa Korbatov supported putting 300 parking spaces under the new athletic building, putting the total cost of the high school at approximately $170 million.

Manaster said he was in favor of the spaces under the new building but only if they could get about 300 spaces and his support is contingent on the cost. Manaster said he wanted a proposal on the parking to come back.

Board of Education member Brian Goldberg did not support paying approximately $20 million for parking and was not sure that a full $180 million was necessary to spend at the high school, his argument being that the community would not support such a large amount of money spent on a parking facility and that money can be better divided among the five school sites in the entire district.

“My whole notion is that $20 million for parking is a huge investment in this campus,” said Goldberg.

Goldberg said he did not believe the parking is critical and the amount of money proposed to be spent on parking made him nervous.

“We’re spending $62 million at Horace Mann, I [have to] believe that Hawthorne and El Rodeo, maybe they need $30 or $35 million in order to do it right,” said Goldberg. “We haven’t gotten to those yet and maybe when we do, I’ll feel more comfortable, but why lock ourselves in and not give ourselves that flexibility?”

Board of Education Vice President Noah Margo supported parking under the football field. He said it would be easiest to phase and would come later in the project so if the project goes over budget, the parking could be cut back.

The parking under the football field would be well ventilated, but it would put the football field out of use for two years.

The total cost also includes the installation of a regulation sized pool, a cost of $1.2 million. The pool would be 8 lanes and 25 meters. The swim gym is not a regulation sized pool.

DLR will place all the elements agreed upon on a single piece of paper and bring it back with the figures in place. Consultants from Bernards, DLR architects and Tim Buresh all felt confident the numbers in cost of the construction were accurate. Buresh said he would bring back numbers on the new athletic building to include the fourth basketball court and a proposal on the parking under the new building. Cohen Gehring from DLR said they would bring back a proposal on vehicular circulation behind building A.

“I am pleased that all my colleagues agree on major renovations on the academic space,” briefs cont. on page 4

Millard Sheets' mural dedication ceremony postponed

The Millard Sheets' mural dedication ceremony, which had been planned for Tuesday, May 7 has been postponed at the request of Mayor John Mirisch. A new date has not been scheduled.

"I've thought from the beginning it should be higher and where it can be viewed from more angles and be way more visible especially if we would then want to light it up at night," said Mirisch. "It's blocked from many angles."

The mural, which has already been installed above the Rexford Drive entrance to the civic center parking garage, will be on Tuesday's city council study session. Mirisch has requested the height of the mural be discussed before the dedication ceremony take place.

When the mural went before the City Council last October, staff presented the work and Mirisch proposed installing the work higher.

Staff studied placing the mural higher and ultimately decided to place the mural at the height that had been originally recommended, according to Assistant Director of Community Services Nancy Hunt-Coffey, who is staff liaison for the Fine Art Commission.

"We had to have a structural engineer and an architect study placing the piece on the parking structure because the piece weighs over 10,000 pounds," said Hunt-Coffey. "The way it was originally engineered was to fit literally on the first floor of the parking structure, so the weight is literally sitting on the concrete floor of the parking structure, which provides a lot of support."

Hunt-Coffey said the engineers can redesign a new system for supporting the piece, but it would be substantially more expensive and Hunt-Coffey said the feeling was that most people would be seeing the structure from their cars as they entered the structure.

Hunt-Coffey also said most of Millard Sheets' murals are placed over the entrance to the buildings, so staff felt the placement was keeping with the wish of the artist. However, walking out of City Hall the mural is not visible and it is blocked by a foot bridge from the side of Rexford where the Beverly Hills Public Library is located.

The Fine Art Commission voted unanimously to accept the name "El Camino Real" as the title of the mural, which was never named, at the commission meeting on April 18. The artist's son, Tony Sheets preferred that title to any other option.

The mural was in storage for 25 years and once hung in the Beverly Wilshire Hotel. Hunt-Coffey said they were calling it the mural from the Beverly Wilshire Hotel, unofficially.

"El Camino Real is the street that ran along the front of the Beverly Wilshire Hotel and it was a significant part of California History, which the mural ties to," said Hunt-Coffey.

The commission also received a presentation from LA >> Art, a nonprofit organization that represents emerging artists, at its previous meeting on March 21. The organization wanted to lend or gift one of Sam Falls' pieces to the City. The commission sent a formal letter declining the offer to LA >> Art.

The commission also discussed a missing art piece from Two Rodeo Drive. The commission first discussed the missing piece last October. Staff was investigating what the art piece look liked and how it was removed from the property.

The missing art work has been identified as two sculptural columns that originally fulfilled the fine art obligation for the property. Staff met with the property's general manager Bill Wiley, who will attend the commission's May meeting to discuss options.

The commission also voted unanimously to purchase two light fixtures for Roxy Paine's Erratic as well as an astronomical clock that would control when all the lighting for the works of art in the sculpture garden would be activated. The sculpture garden is in Beverly Gardens Park on Santa Monica Boulevard between Rodeo and Beverly Drive. The fixtures and clock will be purchased from F.I.R.E., Ltd., for a figure not to exceed $1,500.

said Margo, who said though the Board spoke in depth about parking, that all members recognized the importance of the academic portion of the high school, which led to a swift decision.

Buresh said the next step would be to talk about phases of construction. Moving forward with this plan would require bond acceleration.

Goldberg said he agreed with a lot of what the board had discussed at the meeting with the exception of parking. However, he clarified that he would not support the acceleration of the Measure E bond because he was on the Board when it was passed by voters.

"There was a commitment made and I'm standing by that commitment -- that we're not raising the tax rate even though it was predicated on [false] information," said Goldberg, who clarified that it did not mean he would not be supportive of the plan.

"This is counterintuitive that even though it's all based on lies, you're still standing by something that's fallacious," said Korbatov.

Planning Commission asks council to add automated parking to work plan

The Beverly Hills Planning Commission gave staff direction at their April 25 meeting to send a letter to the City Council to add the study of automatic parking to the city planning division's 2013-2014 work plan. Planning Commission Chair Craig Corman dissented.

"I didn't really feel it was a good idea to send a letter asking them to put it on the budget because there are other things, I think that are already on the budget that are more important to the city and if this were to be put on the budget, it probably would bump something else that may be better to study," said Corman, who said the planning department is already working with a full plate.

An automated parking system is an attendant-free parking garage, in which the car is parked automatically. The electronically-powered system parks the car in an appropriate spot until it is needed by the driver again.

"I think there's going to be an increasing demand as the technology for these improves and as the city look at projects such as the south east task force projects this is a perfect thing that would provide adequate parking in that area where we have small lots and it's an under parked area," said Commissioner Dan Yukelson.

Yukelson said he saw the garage at UCLA

Outpatient Surgery Center in Santa Monica. The commission discussed the system at the March 28. Corman and Vice Chair Brian Rosenstein did not attend the March 28 meeting.

Yukelson said he was aware that West Hollywood was looking into the installation of the garage and thought Beverly Hills should be on the "leading edge."

Beverly Hills could not accommodate an automated parking garage due to current city code, so the commission is seeking council approval to use staff resources to study the item further.

Corman said he would prefer to see this study be done in response to an application by an interested developer, in which case the applicant would fund city staff's time and the city would not need to budget for the study separately.

During the meeting, Corman asked why the City would not wait for an applicant to propose the project. Commissioner Howard Fisher said it would let people know that "there's an opportunity here and we've thought about it."

The council will decide if they will add the study to the plan and if so, where it would be listed as a priority.

The commission also reviewed the capital improvement program for 2013/2014, as required by state law, for consistency with the general plan.

Mayor John Mirisch creates "Sunshine" Task Force

Mayor John Mirisch has implemented a sunshine task force so that the City can "focus on the principals of good government and setting the standards for the most transparent and inclusive local government possible," he said.

The Council/ Task Force Ad Hoc Liaison Committee held its first meeting on Tuesday to discuss the task force mission and proposed initiatives.

"I hope we come up with some ideas for further discussion and for policy implementation from the council about ways that we can make our government more transparent, more participatory and closer to the people," said Mirisch.

Like the Southeast Task Force, Mirisch expects the task force to come up with a list of recommendations for open government. He said he hopes the recommendations are specific, so the council may adopt them.

Vice Mayor Lili Bosse, the other council liaison for the task force, said City Hall belongs to the residents and feels the task force is necessary to make the residents feel like City Hall is accessible to them.

Beverly Hills Bar Association awards local entertainment lawyer

Beverly Hills resident Nina Shaw, a founding partner of Del, Shaw, Moonves, Tanaka, Finkelstein & Lezcano, was honored as 2013 Entertainment Lawyer of the Year by the Entertainment Law Section of the Beverly Hills Bar Association at its annual awards dinner on April 16 at The Beverly Hills Hotel.

“My hope is that we come up with better alternatives for noticing. Unfortunately, there has been too many times where residents have felt they didn’t know about meetings or topics or issues that are being discussed whether it be through city council or through commission, so I’m hoping that some ideas can be come up with to better inform everybody so people feel that they can be a part of it,” said Bosse.

On April 11, Mirisch requested that the council discuss reviewing the Planning Commission decision to grant Infiniti a conditional use permit for one of their four proposed locations in the City of Beverly Hills for 9031 Olympic Boulevard.

Though the council decided not to review the decision, many speakers said they had concerns about Infiniti in the neighborhood and some felt there had been a lack of process for resident involvement. The criteria for noticing had been met, but Bosse said there may be a way of expanding the parameters to involve a larger net of people using various types of media.

Bosse said she’d also like residents to know how decisions are made and when staff is meeting with a developer or working on a specific project.

decisions are being made behind closed doors and I think we need to devise a methodology that there isn’t an idea of a closed door city hall rather than windows where it’s open for everyone to see,” said Bosse.

The Task Force consists of Chuck Aronberg, Ed Brown, Mark Eliot, Marilyn Gallup, Gerald Lunn, Fred Fenster, Stella Sarraf, and Thomas White.

In its evaluation, the organization found Beverly Hills was transparent in making budget documents available, posting Council meeting schedule, agendas, and minutes, posting Elected officials names and photos, posting administrative officials names and titles, providing building permit and zoning information, posting bids online, posting information for public records requests, and posting compensation for full-time employees online.

Board of Education directs staff to disseminate district finance committee letter to community

The Board gave staff direction on April 23 to move forward in getting bids to distribute a letter written by the district finance committee to the community regarding a possible Measure E bond acceleration.

Staff will bring the item back for Board approval before it is sent to the community. Board directed staff to issue a request for proposal with exact costs of inserting the letter in both community newspapers, in addition to using the PACE email and phone system, which would not be of any extra cost to the district. Staff will also check prices for e-blasts sent by the Courier.

Board member Lisa Korbatov suggested the letter be on a textured paper or a color so that it would stand out.

The District Finance Committee wrote a letter to the Beverly Hills community in order to "set the record straight," in regards to Measure E, which was presented to the Board at the formal meeting on March 12. The report defines capital appreciation bonds and explains why the committee feels the $49.71 promised tax rate is inaccurate.

The report lists four assumptions, in which, they feel the Measure E tax rate was promised that were inaccurate – unrealized property growth projections, projected Capital Appreciation Bond interest rate did not materialize, a bond issuance schedule that was not consistent with upgrading school buildings, and the issuance of Capital Appreciation Bonds that may soon no longer be within legal limits.

To speed the process along, Superintendent Gary Woods suggested the Board put a not-to-exceed amount in place. Woods said if the board would put a not to exceed amount, they would not how best to utilize that money.

Board of Education Vice President Noah Margo said he preferred to have the proposals brought back.

The three fraud charges in the indictment each carry a statutory maximum sentence of 20 years in federal prison.

Board tables amendment of contracts for Horace Mann Auditorium Project

The Board tabled the amendment to a contract with UCMI Inc. for the Horace Mann Auditorium Project at the formal meeting on April 23. UCMI served as the inspector for the Horace Mann auditorium and these services must be extended to May 15 to ensure that the Department of the State Architect can close the project.

Kelvin Okino of Bernards said the inspector was not on site full time because construction on the auditorium was winding down. Okino said he was confident an amendment would not be needed past May 15.

"In reviewing the transmittal, I noticed that there were time issues as far as the submitting of this proposal," said Board of Education Vice President Noah Margo.

Margo said he was concerned about the lack of procedure, which he had also noticed the previous meeting.

"I can no longer support this especially because it's not the board that is causing the delay," said Margo.

Margo also said that he noticed that UCMI did not send Bernards a proposal to the amendment until after the contract had exceeded. Margo said he respected the work of staff but he could not support this.

Board President Jake Manaster asked what the consequences would be if they did not have an inspector on site. Okino said DSA would potentially not close the project.

"My impression is that some of these delays are the fault of the contractor," said Manaster.

Manaster asked Okino how much time [the contractor] was responsible for in terms of delays.

"If they are [responsible], why wouldn't they pay for this?" he said.

Okino said Bernards was analyzing the schedule. However, Okino confirmed there was responsibility on behalf of the contractor and that Bernards was working to recoup some costs.

The Board decided to bring the item back once Bernards had resolved who was responsible for delays. Board member Lewis Hall opposed tabling the item.

WHICH L.A. MAYORAL CANDIDATE IS THE BEST FOR BEVERLY HILLS?

Greuel leads Garcetti in Beverly Hills fundraising despite trailing in the polls

By Andrea Aldana

Though Beverly Hills residents will not be voting on May 21, Beverly Hills has played a role in campaign contributions in the Los Angeles mayoral election between Eric Garcetti and Wendy Greuel.

Greuel's campaign has raised $415,948 from the Beverly Hills area in the period from March 18, 2011 to April 6, 2013 in direct donations. Garcetti's campaign has raised $346,266 from Sept. 8, 2011 to April 6, 2013, according to campaign contribution statements listed on the L.A. City Ethics Commission website.

Donations made directly to the candidates are limited to $1,300 in the primary and $1,300 in the general election per donor.

Between both Garcetti and Greuel, they have raised a total of approximately $17.5 million, including donations given directly to candidates and money from independent contributors that can raise and spend unlimited sums.

Greuel has out-raised her opponent with over $10.4 million in campaign contributions to Garcetti's $7.04 million.

Following the March election, Garcetti finished first with 33 percent of the vote. Greuel came in second with 29 percent of the vote.

Despite having raised more money and receiving well-known endorsements, such as from former President Bill Clinton, Garcetti leads Greuel by 10 points, according to a recent L.A. Times/USC poll.

Greuel has attacked Garcetti for his ties to the oil wells run by Venoco, Inc. under Beverly High. Garcetti and several family members signed a 20-year lease in 1998, which allowed the company the subsurface drilling rights to a nearby Beverly Hills retail property on the 9600 block of Wilshire Boulevard that Garcetti co-owns through a personal trust.

The Los Angeles Times first reported Garcetti's ties to the controversial oil company's operations on the community's only high school campus on Feb. 26, which Garcetti had failed to disclose. Since, it has been a point of attack on Garcetti by Greuel's campaign.

Venoco has not extracted oil from beneath the property owned by Garcetti and Garcetti told the L.A. Times that he received a few dollars or less a year from the agreement. If Venoco began slant surface drilling beneath the property, Garcetti could stand to earn a much more substantial amount.

Garcetti voted in favor of a 2005 council resolution opposing Venoco's efforts to increase its drilling offshore.

His spokesperson Jeff Millman told the L.A. Times that the Wilshire property once housed a clothing store run by Garcetti's late grandfather, Harry Roth, and is currently a hair salon that pays rent to Garcetti and the relatives, including his sister and cousins, and his grandfather's trust.

Millman also told the Times that Garcetti had no memory of signing the lease. Greuel has criticized Garcetti for failing to disclose the property as he campaigns as an environmentalist and has since has criticized him for not ending the agreement.

A day before the March 5 primary election, Greuel's campaign sent out a press release, which stated "pressure is mounting for Garcetti to cut ties with Venoco, which has been sued for allegedly causing cancer in former high school students and fined for illegally venting gasses over the high school's playing fields."

The release also included a quote from Erin Brockovich who led the suit against Venoco in 2003 alleging that the oil company caused many Beverly High graduates to get cancer and Hodgkin's disease.

"I think [Greuel is] resorting to desperate gutter ball campaign tactics and I've completely lost any respect for her integrity by her use of those ridiculous allegations," said former Mayor Barry Brucker, who was Board of Education president in 2003 at the time of the oil well lawsuit.

Greuel's campaign launched a television ad in mid-April that stated that Garcetti would profit as toxic levels would be released harming school children.

The oil well at Beverly High has long been a point of controversy. In 2003, the air quality management district and Venoco reached a settlement based on three air quality violations by the company. As part of the settlement, Venoco installed two air quality monitors measuring hydrocarbon and methane, and is prohibited from venting oil field gas into the atmosphere, and installed sensors that would detect unpermitted releases of oil field gas.

Brockovich, who famously won $333 million for the residents of Hinkley, Ca. in a suit against Pacific Gas and Electric, filed a suit against Venoco in 2003 alleging that toxic fumes from oil wells beneath Beverly High had caused more than 216 cases of Hodgkin's disease, non-Hodgkin's lymphoma and thyroid cancer since the 1970s.

Brockovich and her boss Ed Masry filed 23 lawsuits at the Los Angeles Superior Court against the BHUSD, the South Coast Air Quality Management District and the oil companies that have drilled at the site since the early 1980s.

The lawsuits were dismissed in 2007 because the court ruled there was not enough evidence to prove the levels of benzene at the high school were higher than anywhere else in the Los Angeles area or that the cancer rate among Beverly High graduates was higher than the national average.

The City Council has decided not to renew the lease with Venoco when it expires in 2016.

The council approved the City's oil well drilling ordinance on Sept. 27, 2011, which prohibits drilling and extracting oil, gas and other hydrocarbon substances from surface locations in the City.

The ordinance allows the three-party lease for the Beverly High site between the City, BHUSD and Venoco to continue until it expires on Dec. 31, 2016. The current lease has been in effect since 1978.

"I led the charge on behalf of the city council when I was mayor to not renew the contract with Venoco in 2016 so it's a completely inappropriate use to have an oil drilling facility on a school site, but to blame Eric Garcetti for that is absolutely irresponsible campaign tactics," said Brucker, who cited instances of leaks in the past and had concerns of the site's proximity to the students.

The ordinance also includes a provision that the City Council may extend the date of the lease upon finding it is in the public interest to do so. The ordinance does not prohibit slant drilling in Beverly Hills, but language in the ordinance prohibits any drilling beneath the City from originating at a site that is within 500 feet of a school or park property in the City of Beverly Hills.

Venoco Community Relations Manager Lisa Rivas said the company does not have plans to relocate to a different facility and slant drill under the high school and when the contract expires, the company would like to see production in existing wells continue.

Rivas said the City receives more than $500,000 a year and the school district receives more than that annually from royalties.

There are 18 wells that produce oil and natural gas from the Beverly High location. Rivas clarified that while the company is producing oil and gas, it is not drilling new wells. Rivas said the company would meet with the district and city council as the date of the lease expiration gets closer.

walk-on thanks in part to an online recruiting service and playing on club teams.

Watts said she chose to attend LIU Brooklyn because it offered her the opportunity to play on the Division I level and the chance to live in New York City.

"New York and especially Brooklyn, is so upcoming," said Watts, who is planning on studying media arts and graphic design and is considering a career in marketing.

Watts said she was contacted by then-LIU Brooklyn assistant coach Amanda Hughes during her junior year, which increased her interest in the program.

Watts' mother Kerri Watts recorded her daughter's play during her junior season and edited the video to highlights.

She then turned to NCSA Athletic Recruiting, which has an online program to connect high school athletes with college coaches, to help bolster her daughter's chances of playing in college.

"One of the worst misconceptions that parents think is that it's the high school coach's job to help them get recruited and it doesn't work that way at all," Kerri Watts said.

"It is not the coach's responsibility. It falls upon the athlete and parent to create the path for getting recruited. You have to be very pro-active."

Dillan Watts received emails from about four coaches of Division I programs, eight from coaches in Division II, which grants fewer scholarships, and 38 coaches on the Division III level, which does not offer scholarships, her mother said.

Kerri Watts learned the Northern California-based Bay Area Wave club team needed additional players for national tournaments and her daughter joined that team and "that's where we learned how much work she needed to do to get ready to play in college," Kerri Watts said.

Watts decided not to play volleyball at Beverly High as a senior, instead practicing and playing with the Los Angeles Wave team, including the Presidents Cup in Naples, Fla. this fall, a key tournament for college coaches seeking players.

Dillan Watts had trained in gymnastics from when she was 4 to 10 years old, but said she decided to leave the sport when the coaches wanted her to be home schooled to increase her training time.

"I didn't want to go that route," she said. "I thought it was too big of a decision."

Dillan Watts went on to play soccer and volleyball and as a freshman, tried out for lacrosse after her mother told her, "You should try this new sport."

"I never heard about it before," Dillan Watts said.

She said she quickly realized "there was so much freedom" involved in the sport and it combined elements of several other sports, including soccer and basketball.

"I love playing midfield because I can run back and fourth and play a little of both" offense and defense, Dillan Watts said.

Cleveland Browns sign Beverly High graduate

Caylin Hauptmann, a 2009, Beverly High graduate, signed with the Cleveland Browns

Saturday after being bypassed in the NFL draft.

Hauptmann, a 6-foot-4-inch, 312-pound offensive lineman who played at Florida International, was a second-team All-Sun Belt Conference selection in both 2011 and 2012.

Hauptmann is scheduled to join the rest of the Browns' rookies in a three-day mini-camp May 10-12 at the team's training facility in Berea, Ohio.
