SIGNING OFF ON SALARIES LASKY DRIVE

BHEA President Telly Tse (left) and Board of Education President Noah Margo (right) signed the Collective Bargaining Agreement yesterday that links teacher salary raises to property tax revenue and other high-paying LA County school districts. But not everyone agrees with the new contracts (see letters on pages 2-3).

City Council approves utility relocation permits and MOA with Metro

A memorandum of agreement and permit applications for the utility relocation phase of the Westside subway extension project were unanimously approved by the City Council on Tuesday.

The state utility code allows Metro to use the public right of way for transportation purposes, but Metro must have a memorandum of agreement with the city regarding the conditions in how it will use the right of way prior to exercising that right, according to City Engineer Mark

La Cienega Station rendering

Medicare, State Unemployment Insurance, State Teachers Retirement System, and Workers' Compensation Insurance.)

- 2. For the next fiscal year, 2015-16, the percentage of increase in property tax revenue, if any, to be allocated to raises in salaries and benefits shall be 65 percent (rather than 70 percent), and in each year thereafter the percentage shall be 55 percent.
- 3. Increases in certificated salaries and benefits shall be temporarily suspended in any year when the highest point on the BHUSD teacher salary schedule is equal to or higher than the corresponding point of all the school districts in Los Angeles County, and shall restart again when the highest point on the BHUSD teacher salary schedule is exceeded by the corresponding point of any other district in the county.
- 4. There will be no increase in certificated salaries and benefits in years when there has been no growth in property tax revenue, or when property tax revenue has decreased.

Our primary concern regarding this unprecedented commitment is that in effect it ties the hands of future school boards, depriving them of the ability to negotiate salaries and benefits, which amount to some 80 percent of total district expenditures; consequently it will diminish their capacity to manage the fiscal stability and sustainability of the district. It will be exceedingly difficult for future school boards to negotiate for salary levels lower than those bloated by the formula approved by this board.

Salaries and benefits under this formula are certain to become excessively bloated. As an example, in any given year a salary level set by another district exceeding that in the BHUSD by one dollar will automatically bring about an across-the-board increase in the BHUSD salary schedule based on property tax revenue that could amount to 3 - 6 percent or more, or in the range of one to two million dollars annually. Such increases in the salary schedule will cumulate over time, eventually destabilizing the district's fiscal condition.

Judging from history, in years ahead the district will likely experience shortfalls in revenue (as a result of reductions in property tax revenue or State mandates or both) and unanticipated expenses (such as legal fees, lawsuit judgments not covered by insurance, upgrading of buildings absent bond measure funds, and unfunded pension liability). A combination of such adverse conditions could wipe out the district's reserves within a single year and render it incapable of meeting bloated payrolls.

We are concerned also about this school board's unprecedented concept of reaching and maintaining the highest salary and benefits schedule among the 50 or so school districts in Los Angeles County. Some districts, due to size or other circumstances, might set salary schedules that are inappropriate for the BHUSD. Moreover, if other districts in the county adopt the same concept they will be constantly outbidding each other and the BHUSD to boast the highest salary levels.

Another problem with this concept is that salary schedules vary from district to district as to years of service and professional development levels. Comparing them each year with the BHUSD will likely result in ongoing conflicts with the certificated bargaining unit.

The rationale for this agreement as expressed by members of the school board is, "to have the highest salaries in L.A. County in order to facilitate recruitment; to forge a partnership with BHEA; to vest the certificated staff in the financial success of the District; to respond to the hard negotiating stance of BHEA and take away the tug of negotiations; to define teachers' salaries by the property values in Beverly Hills."

In conclusion, the predictable adverse consequences of this commitment outweigh by far the rationale expressed by school board members. The action they have taken is rash and ill-conceived. If it is not reversed in some manner it will likely impact the financial viability of our school district, possibly to the extent of insolvency and loss of local control.

"Designs conditionally approved for 308 North Elm Drive" [Issue #776]

The Design Review Commission has conditionally approved plans for a new two story single family home to be built at 308 North Elm. They refer to the design as "Italianate."

I am not an architect but I know bad design when I see it. Our city is loosing its character to these cookie cutter plans that stretch the limits of a given property to accommodate these grossly exaggerated homes that overwhelm their neighbors. They are without originality or any pleasing addition to the lasting appearance of Beverly Hills. Italianate?

These homes are identical block after block, and always get the rubber stamp from those who are responsible for "review and approval." This house didn't need an architect. It could have been presented using a box of Lego blocks. Rule number one, have a two-story entrance. Number two, build out to the very edge of the overly generous limits in size relation to the lot. Number three, add a row of Spanish tile to the roofline and call the design Italianate. Oh yes, make sure it is a box.

"This letter of agreement shows the commitment of Metro to hear the concerns and to timely handle them," Metro's attorney Debra Fox said. "We're very confident that we have a thorough agreement that does address these issues."

The commission knows that the same architect has submitted the same design several times. Commissioner Susan Strauss is quoted saying, "Give us something that will make the neighborhood look a little more alive." Mr. Borukhim, the architect, says he does see some resemblance to the other four projects he s working on. A Xerox machine is the tool of choice in producing these projects.

Our city can do better, but not if we all sit back and let this mediocrity prevail.

"We didn't want to rely solely on the ambient measurements taken at the property lines closest to Wilshire," Wiener said. "There may be a more noise sensitive location that we won't recognize until construction actually starts."

Metro Awards Purple Line Construction Contract

A joint venture of three of the largest construction companies in the world will tackle the first phase of extending Metro Rail's Purple Line to Westwood. The contract calls for building twin subway tunnels on a 4-mile route with three new stations at Wilshire/La Brea, Wilshire/Fairfax and Wilshire/La Cienega.

Go Metro to College Football

Fall is football season, and Metro is the smart choice for fans attending USC and UCLA home games. To reach the LA Coliseum, connect with the Metro Expo Line and exit at the Expo/Vermont or Expo Park/USC stations. For UCLA games at the Rose Bowl, take the Metro Gold Line to Memorial Park Station in Pasadena.

A penalty will be enforced and an immediate halt work order will be in place for any permit conditions that may be violated. There will be a penalty fee of $10,000 on the third violation, and each subsequent violation will be $15,000.

A business mitigation assistance of $1 million, which increased from $250,000 from the previous proposal, will include coverage for advertising for local businesses, parking validation programs and up to two cameras or other surveillance equipment. The cost of any additional noise mitigation will not come from the business mitigation assistance.

To address the Saban Theatre's concerns during the construction process, Metro must provide the full sidewalk width during events, maintain access to the business, and prohibit work on holidays.

Water, sewer, storm drain and electrical utility services will interfere with the construction of the La Cienega station between La Cienega Boulevard and Tower Drive and need to be relocated.

There will be an excavation of approximately 1,000 feet long, 75 feet wide, and 75 feet deep to prepare for the station construction. In order to maintain utility usage during this time, the existing utilities under the street need be relocated and rearranged so that it could be supported during the excavation and construction of the station.

The utility relocation permits included daytime work between the hours of 7:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m., and will maintain two lanes of traffic in both directions. Whenever parking is restricted Metro must provide alternative parking.

City staff estimated that approximately 90 days of nighttime work would be needed to address specific construction work, including activities that will cause service interruption, a need to reduce traffic to one lane in each direction, and if access to the buildings are blocked from pedestrian access.

"If all of the provisions that have been put in to protect the residents and the businesses and the Saban work, and at the same time allow Metro to get done what it needs to get done in a timely fashion, I think that would be a huge success," Vice Mayor Julian Gold said.

City Council approves permit parking only on 200 blocks of South Swall and Almont drives

The City Council unanimously approved permit parking only zones for the 200 blocks of South Swall and Almont drives on Tuesday.

"It's about time that you all get your streets back and enjoy the quality of life you all deserve," Councilmember Willie Brien said.

The residential requests were in response to a recent approval of a preferential parking zone in the 200 block of La Peer Drive.

The parking zone would be modified to a no parking zone from 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. from Monday through Saturday with no evening regulation, with the exemption of "AL" permits.

In anticipation of spillover parking from La Peer to the adjoining streets, the City Council opened the opportunity for Swall and Almont to also petition for the same preferential parking modifications.

At their August 7 meeting, Traffic and Parking Commission Alan Grushcow was the sole voter against the preferential parking. He said that though the residents have the right and privilege to petition for a changed parking area, the decision for preferential parking should be made based on actions at the moment, not "perceived actions that may or may not happen."

Residents on both Swall and Almont drive expressed their concerns on spill-over parking onto their streets. They said that with cars parked on both sides of the driveway, and on both sides of the street, it was difficult to back out of their own driveway.

Former Mayor Ed Brown expressed his concern regarding preferential permit parking for La Peer, Almont, and Swall Drives.

"We are not solving the problems of parking because all you're doing is bringing these problems to another area adjacent to these streets," Brown said. "If we keep going the way we're going, we're probably going to have every street a preferential parking street."

According to Mayor Lili Bosse, though the city is looking to buy property on Robertson Boulevard for a parking area, the streets still belong to the residents.

"The residential streets are not to be used as commercial streets," Bosse said. "They are meant to be for the residents."

Public Works Commission recommends water conservancy mandates

The Public Works Commission recommend a modified stage B water regulation plan that will go before the City Council on September 2 that will implement $100 penalty fines for water overuse.

The commission looked at exempting tier one water users, who use 130 gallons a day, from the penalty fee structure. Approximately 17 percent of accounts, which are approximately 1,700 to 1,800 accounts, are tier one users, according to Public Works Services Director George Chavez.

Commissioner Sandra Aronberg said that tier 1 accounts should be exempt because they are already doing their part in conserving water and should be rewarded for their efforts.

"Everybody is in this together and everybody needs to help," Commission Chair Barry Pressman said. "If you're not thinking about it at home, you might not think about it in a restaurant. We're all in it together and we all need to pull together."

The goal was for water conservation is to have residents reduce water usage by 10 percent.

Rhay, based on an assumption that 50 percent of accounts will reduce water usage by 10 percent, 25 percent of the accounts will have no reduction, and 25 percent will use five percent more water, which has been the trend over the last few years, the cost of operations to deliver water to the residences would be recovered, and there would be an addition $1.7 million revenue.

Chair Barry Pressman said that the estimate was too conservative, and that he predicts that people will be more conservative with their water usage, and the revenue would be less.

A watering schedule would be implemented in the city of Beverly Hills. Residences north of Santa Monica would water their landscape on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday, and residences south of Santa Monica would water their landscape on Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday. Watering would be prohibited on Sundays, and between the hours of 9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m.

Other water conservation mandates would include having day specific watering schedules, along with prohibiting excessive use of water which is defined by hosing down driveways or washing cars without a stop water hose, and restaurants serving water upon request.

Each violation would incur a $100 fine. A water surcharge, which is anything over a 90 percent usage when compared to usage in the previous year, would also incur a penalty fee.

Pressman said he preferred to have the $100 fine at first, and then if the drought worsens that the fee be increased to a stage C penalty fee, which is $500.

"We're facing a crisis, but we're not in a crisis yet," Pressman said.

Planning Commission approves joint paid parking for lingual institute

The Planning Commission unanimously approved joint parking for the Beverly Hills Lingual Institute on August 7, with conditions that include $2 for two hour parking, and $5 for four hour parking.

"We are not a big money organization, we are providing a service," Beverly Hills Lingual Institute owner Karin Fallon said. "We are not making enough money to pay for the parking."

The Beverly Hills Lingual Institute will be located on the second story in a ten-story building at 8383 Wilshire Boulevard with three levels of subterranean parking, which has a total of 1,048 parking spaces and 524 spaces available for joint use parking. Another tenant, Hot 8 Yoga, was previously approved for 40 joint use spaces, leaving 444 spots remaining for joint parking.

The linguistic institute requested to have a parking payment system with $2 for the first two hours of parking, and $5 for four hours of parking. Since class

One Book, One City

Human Relations Chair Rochelle Ginsburg discusses the citywide reading program

Author of The Boys in the Boat Daniel James Brown and Human Relations Commission Chair Rochelle Ginsberg

How did the One Book, One City project start?

The One Book, One City project was the outcome of a conversation in the Human Relations Commission. We were thinking about what could be the next step in the Embrace Civility initiative.

The initiative establishes the importance of embracing civility and integrates the principals of civility, respect and responsible action into business at City Hall and municipal elections proceedings. That has been the driving force behind everything that the commission has done for about the past six years.

We started out with the civility statement that's posted in the City Hall chambers, in the City Council chambers, and in various places throughout the city. Out of that civility statement came the "Embrace Civility" campaign, which was to go beyond elections to civility in the general way of people relating to one another

Next was the Embrace Civility Award, which identifies one person, who is not a celebrity, each year who does something that really enhances the quality of life in some way in the city. After that was City program.

whole idea of, "civility as a Services Supervisor Alice Kuo community," and thought, wouldn't it be great if we did a One Book One City?

The goal of the One Book, One City project is to create an additional dimension to the Beverly Hills community by inviting all residents to participate in a shared reading experience that will generate thoughtful dialogue and foster respect and appreciation among the diverse constituents of our city.

The project has been done before in other cities. What is unique about what we are doing is the collaboration between the Human Relations Commission, the city public library, and the BHUSD. We have three groups in the city working together to create something that embraces all of the city in a common experience.

The exciting thing about it was that we took it to the library and we took it to the school district and everybody said "I'm in." The City Council really was 100 percent behind it. It's really wonderful because it truly is a city endeavor.

Why was The Boys in the Boat selected?

The librarian, people from the school district, [Chief Academic Officer] Jennifer Tedford and [Beverly High honors English teacher] Julie Goler, and others on a steering committee, including myself, reviewed a lot of titles. We chose this book because it's not a kid's book, but it's not only an adult book. It's not a men's book, and it's not a woman's book. It's appealing to athletes, it's appealing to people who love history, and it's appealing to people who care about the United States and patriotism.

The thematic material of this book was perfect for what we were trying to achieve. The book's message is that a small, diverse group of people, exceeding the strength of any single one of its members, can, by working together towards a common accomplish great things. This is really what the story of this book is. A small group of young people came together for a common purpose and literally turned the world upside down.

This was the 1936 Olympics where the Germans were anticipated to win because they had every advantage, from weather to position. This was to be Hitler's Olympics where he was going to show the world the superiority of the Aryan race. Then in comes this ragtag group of kids from the University of Washington, who were certainly not privileged kids, and they won those Olympics.

The amazing thing about this book is you know the outcome of the story before you start reading it, and it's still suspenseful. It was just the perfect choice for us. Everybody who's reading it loves it.

Will this be an annual project?

"We have three groups

in the city working together to create something that embraces all of the city in a common experience"

- Human Relations

Commission Chair

Rochelle Ginsburg

When you start something and you think it's terrific, you hope that you make this the beginning of something that will go on and on. But realistically, my approach is always you do something as well as you can once, and then you evaluate it and say, "How did it go well? What could we improve?" and then you make a decision.

Is this something we want to continue annually? Every other year? Should all the same people be involved? Those are all the questions you ask later.

What do you hope to come out of the project in the end?

We would hope that at the end of this project, many people from different generations, from different neighborhoods, and from different ethnicities will have read this book, and have embraced the theme that is so compelling. They will have conversations about the book, they will share the book with others, and they will come to the events. We will have a community event that's not an entertainment event, but it is a different kind of event that will bring people together, like the theme of the book, in a common purpose.

We have many students from the high school reading it. We're going to be con> ducting a discussion group at Roxbury Park with the seniors, the three library book groups are going to be discussing it, and then many of us in the city who lead private book group discussion, we're all reading it with our book groups, and having those discus-

> We have had wonderful community support. So far, a commitment for sponsorship has been made by Wells Fargo, City National Bank, Ghearys, the Rotary Club, Temple Emanuel, Friends of the Library, and other individuals.

Jean Rosenblatt was the first person to step up as a sponsor. She provided 500 copies of The Boys in the Boat for high school students and faculty. We have people who are actually putting their money behind the idea and sponsoring this event so that we can carry it out in an enthusiastic way.

We hope that we're really gathering a lot of community enthusiasm for some-

How has this experience with the One Book One City been for you?

From my vantage point as the Chair of the Human Relations Commission, the fact that we are working with the BHUSD really brings things full circle for me in doing what I love. When I was in the classroom before I was an administrator, I taught middle school English, so this is what I did. I found a new place to do what I love to do.

I'm really focused on the collaboration between the city, the library, and the school district.

We interviewed you last year when you became the Human Relations Chair, and then you said in that interview, "who are we in our own neighborhoods and how does that enrich us? What opportunity does that diversity provide for us. I don't know that we've tapped into our diversity as an opportunity." How has having this project helped into you tapping into that diversity?

I think time will tell. Hopefully we will have representation from the entire community in terms of participating in this initiative. Certainly our high school groups, this was part of their summer reading. They themselves represent a diverse population. If you take these high school kids as an example, they will be having conversations about what it means to work as a team, to collaborate, to cooperation, to respect other people, to care about other people, and to put your effort toward a common purpose.

That's the kind of conversation that if they're having at the school, if we're having it in our discussion groups, the truth of the matter is people are entitled to chose whether or not to engage with this. We hope that it will be compelling enough that people will chose to do that and say, "Gee this is exciting, I want to be part of that." "I hear this is going on all over the city, I want to read that book."

Hopefully that will be representative of the diversity. As I said, it isn't about diversity of ethnicities, it's about generations. If we have seniors reading the book, and high school students reading the book, if we have men reading the book and women reading the book as well as the various groups that are in the city, that's a lot. I feel really good about that.

What are some of the upcoming events for the project?

October 12 will be our culminating event at Beverly High at the K.L. Peters Auditorium at 3:00 p.m. Attendees must R.S.V.P. to attend.

Judith Palarz with the Friends of the Library will be hosting book discussions on September 2 and September 10 at 10:15 a.m. and on September 18 at 1:00 p.m. at the Beverly Hills Library.

On September 11, I will be conducting a discussion with the seniors at Roxbury Park Community Center at 10:30 a.m.

Multiple copies of The Boys in the Boat are available for check out at the Beverly Hills Public Library. Paperback copies are also available for purchase at The Friends of the Library Book Shop. sessions are 80 minutes, it is more likely that the students will be paying $2 and the teachers will be paying $5 for parking. The institute will subsidize $1 for the teachers to make the payment fair.

"I do believe that the economic impact to this business would be substantial to provide that two hour free parking," Planning Commissioner Brian Rosenstein said.

Beverly Hills has a long-standing policy of two-hour free parking.

"This business does provide a service to the community that I would like to see not leave Beverly Hills," Commissioner Craig Corman said. "I think it still needs to be clear to everyone that our policy for these types of businesses going into buildings for shared parking arrangements is the free parking."

Joint parking, which can only be granted if the business has primarily nighttime use, will allow the lingual institute to use the on-site parking to satisfy its parking requirements.

Traffic analyst Antonio Coco, owner of Coco Traffic Partners, said that according to their traffic and parking report, approximately 150 parking spaces were always available. In order to have the most accurate numbers in a worst case scenario, the report accumulated information from their own surveying, along with two weeks of data from AMPCO, and assumed 100 percent occupancy for the building,

"We're really not talking about $2 a day for something," Coco said. "Every student goes once a week. You're talking about $2 a week, so I think that makes a little bit of a difference."

8383 Wilshire is located near the intersection of Wilshire and San Vicente, with North Gale Drive to the west of the building. Though North Gale Drive is permitted parking and prevents the teachers and students from parking in the residential areas, Commission Chair Howard Fisher said that people are more likely to take free, street parking.

"Even if it were 50 cents and there is free parking on the street, people tend to take the street parking," Chair Howard Fisher said. "Even if it's free, people tend to like street parking if it's available rather than going into a lot and going out."

The institute will have 16 classrooms with a center general study area. Classroom sizes will range from two to ten students per class. The majority of the students are adult professionals who come after 6:00 p.m., typically at the end of their workday, according to Fallon.

Another condition was that the lingual institute would have only 30 students on site at any time between 9:00 a.m. and 6:00 p.m., with an unlimited amount of students after 6:00 p.m.

"We don't want to make [this] a general proposition for all schools or all tenants," Fisher said. "We really don't want to extend it beyond this particular tenant with this particular operation, which is clear that it is something we want to continue to have in the city."

THREE PROPERTIES TO BE ADDED TO THE LOCAL REGISTER OF HISTORIC PROPERTIES

But how much landmarking is too much?

By Nancy Yeang

The City Council unanimously approved including the Writers and Artists Building, the Joe E. Brown residence, and the Ahmanson Bank and Trust building to the historic local register on Tuesday, adding to the 23 properties already listed.

But some residents have criticized the scope of the Cultural Heritage Commission, arguing that instead of having the property owner willingly go through the process, landmarking is instead forced upon the property itself.

"The findings of a property worthy of landmark designation are very broad and very liberal," Former Mayor Steve Webb said. "There's this desire to landmark as many properties as you can regardless of their noteworthiness."

The Harry Cohn estate

Webb represents the owners of 805 North Linden Drive, who decided to resell their property instead of going through the process of becoming designated as a historic landmark. By being landmarked, the owners were unable to make changes to their property that would interfere with the historic integrity of the house.

In effect, the Cultural Heritage Commission rescinded their nomination in July to landmark 805 North Linden Drive.

"It is our job to advise," Cultural Heritage Commission Chair Maralee Beck said. "It is not our job to decide."

The Cultural Heritage Commission worked with the property owners for over a year prior to their decision to resell the property.

"The Cultural Heritage Commission is considering all aspects of properties to make sure that we retain a feel of what the city is like," Beck said. "But we also are very sensitive to the requirements and needs to the property owners."

Ultimately, the City Council will determine whether or not properties will be included on to the Local Register of Historic Properties. The City Council has yet to be approached by owners who were against landmarking their property.

"There have been a number of buildings by master architects that have been approved for demolition that were not deemed worth preserving," Beck said.

Beck said that if only one criterion is met, it doesn't mean that the commission will continue to pursue preserving the property. Other criteria, such as the value of the historical integrity of the building, must be fulfilled in order for the property to be landmarked.

"It is more the intent of the city to preserve notable pieces of its heritage, and sometimes it's a harmonious process and sometimes it isn't," Beck said. "Hopefully, [805 North Linden Drive] will be available for a buyer who will embrace its heritage."

Webb said that the process of landmarking, whether it is voluntary or involuntary,

"The reason I support incentives is because I am firmly opposed to forcing landmark status on any property owner except in exceptional circumstances," Webb said.

The Planning Commission discussed potential incentives to provide for landmarked properties at their August 7 meeting.

Webb suggested that the incentives should apply to property owners who want to preserve their property regardless if it is on the local register or not. If the property owner

Commissioner Craig Corman said. "If that's the case, something's wrong with our land-mark ordinance."

The discussion on potential incentives regarding new additions or developments while maintaining a property's historic resources for locally registered historic properties came about when the owners of the Harry Cohn estate at 1000 North Crescent Drive, which was landmarked as a local historic resource on March 4, requested to add a garage to the main residence that would encroach on the front and side setbacks.

"The only way to put a garage in without affecting the landmark was to evade the front and side setbacks," former Mayor Tom Levyn, attorney for the owners at the Harry Cohn estate, said. "[They] would like some flexibility to build garages and other necessities that they would use today."

The property was built with no garage in the 1920s. The owners would be driven up to the front and be dropped off, and the driver would go back and park the car at the chauffeur's quarters, according to Levyn.

"If we do value preserving our past and respecting the historic and cultural heritage of the community, how do we get property owners to share in that vision in retaining those structures?" former Community Development and Planning Assistant Director Jonathan Lait said. "One way is to develop incentives."

Associate Planner Andre Sahakian provided information on how other cities grant development changes for landmarked properties using different methods, which included waivers that were based on a list of approved requests and waivers that were more openended and would be heard on a case-by-case basis through the appropriate commission.

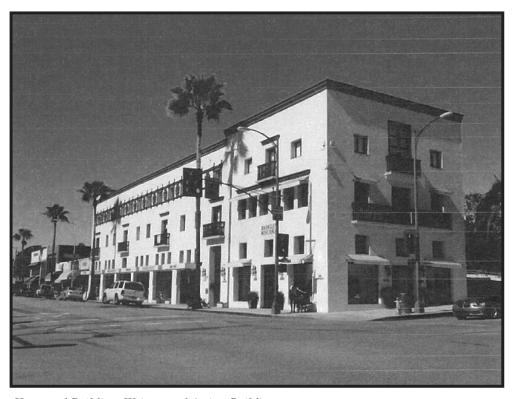

Commissioner Brian Rosenstein said that the incentives should be limited to properties that have already received landmarked status.

"The planning department could be inundated by applications for incentives for a house that may or may not be worthy for landmark designation," Rosenstein said. "It could be hundreds of applications [for properties] that we would have no interest in preserving."

Corman suggested that since each property is unique to its needs, incentives should be open-ended and be brought to the Planning Commission.

"I wouldn't have thought that a garage would be something we would be contemplating, but obviously it's important to this project," Corman said. "The problem with a laundry list is that sometimes things get left off. You don't know what might not be important to a particular project."

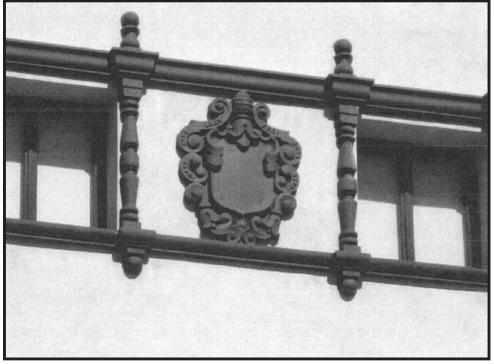

The representatives of the Writers and Artists Building, the Joe E. Brown residence, and the Ahmanson Bank and Trust building expressed their full support on landmarking their properties at the City Council meeting on Tuesday.

The Heegaard Building, also known as the Writers and Artists Building, was built at 9505 South Santa Monica Boulevard in 1924. Master Architect Roy Seldon, who was a Beverly Hills-based architect, and Master Architectural firm Gable and Wyatt, who designed school buildings at Hawthorne, designed the Spanish Colonial Revival threestory building for druggist A.C. Heegaard.

Churrigueresque decorations

Defining architectural features include the Churrigueresque embellishments (pictured above), which were removed, but then later replicated and restored.

The three-story building was the first "high-rise" and multi-use building in the City at the time. The first floor had multiple tenants, including Seldon's architecture office and Heegaard-Hohn Drug Store and Fountain. Several celebrities, including Will Rogers, Charlie Chaplan, and Mary Pickford also became tenants of the building. It was a major center for social activity at the time.

In 1958, Henry Fenenbock Sr. bought the building for its history and as an investment. To fill vacancies, he charged inexpensive rents for the third floor to a variety of writers, artists, and producers including Michael Blankfort, Chuck Barris, Ray Bradbury, and Jack Nicholson. The second floor consisted of office space. It was during this time with the "quirky tenants" that Fenenbock nicknamed the building the Writers and Artists Building.

The current owner Michael Pashaie bought the property in 2008, and extensively restored and upgraded the building, including restoring façade features and bringing in modern facilities such as elevators, sprinklers, and adding fiberglass to the brick to have a more structurally safe building.

A second and third floor directory lists previous writers and artists who were tenants in the building. According to Pashaie, three of the writers still occupy the building.

707 Walden Drive residence

The Joe E. Brown Spanish colonial revival residence at 707 Walden Drive was designed by Master Architect Rene Riverre, who built 17 other homes in Beverly Hills.

"We appreciate the efforts that you do toward preserving Beverly Hills' legacy," owner William Fay said at the meeting.

"We don't want anything to happen to this house," owner Jody Fay added.

The Fays previously restored two other Spanish revival homes in Beverly Hills. The previous owners at 707 Walden wanted to preserve the house, and sold the property to the Fays after seeing the care they took upon a house of similar style.

Actor Joe E. Brown was a former prominent homeowner of the residence, who appeared in the first all color all talking musical comedy, "On with the Show," in 1929, while he was a resident of the house. Brown appeared in 72 other films, and entertained troops during World War II when his career started to decline.

The Ahmanson Bank and Trust building, which is now owned by First Bank, located on 9145 Wilshire Boulevard was designed by artist and designer Millard Sheets, along with the artwork featured throughout the two story building.

The neoclassical Greek style two-story building exhibits Italian white marble cladding with fired gold tile decorations. Two murals are featured on the exterior of the bank, while stained glass panels and wood elements are featured on the interior.

Howard F. Ahmanson founded the Ahmanson Bank and Trust company in 1957, and wanted to build a bank that would specifically serve Beverly Hills residents and the surrounding communities. Ahmanson wanted to have an aesthetically pleasing building that would be appreciated by the community and others.

"If people do want to tear down a building and build from new, there are plenty of buildings that aren't historical [and] that don't meet those criteria," Councilmember John Mirisch said. "But for those that are, it's wonderful to find people who appreciate it and actually love it, because that is the kind of affection [that] comes back to our community, benefits our community and continues to make this [community] special."

Water pipe lines in Beverly Hills not expected to burst

Utilities Manager Trish Rhay assured the City Council on Tuesday that water pipes in Beverly Hills were at low risk of breaking.

After a 30-inch water main broke on Sunset Boulevard on July 29 and leaked 20 million gallons of water, which flooded the UCLA campus, the City Council requested to have an update on the water infrastructure in Beverly Hills to prevent any water main disasters from occurring.

There are 170 miles of water mains in Beverly Hills, with the first one built in 1912. $40 million has been spent on water system replacement projects, and the City has replaced about 38 percent of the system, which is 65 out of 170 miles of the water system, according to Rhay.

"The City of Beverly Hills has had a pretty aggressive water main replacement," Rhay said.

Two factors that are taken into consideration when it comes to failures would be age and the diameter of the pipes. The Public Works department has already or have plans to replace older pipelines, and the diameter of pipes are relatively small.

"If it did break, we have relatively small pipes so the impact would be small," Rhay said.

The national average of water main breaks is 27 breaks per 100 miles in a year. In Beverly Hills, the average is seven water main breaks per 100 miles in a year.

Currently, the city is investing in $19 million over the next five years to fix 18 miles of water pipes.

The Public Works department has also been rehabilitating the reservoirs and treatment plants in the city.

The Public Works department also has rehabilitation plans to reservoirs and treatment plants. Replacements for five steel water reservoirs will be completed in 2014, while the remaining five underground concrete tanks are in "pretty good shape." The water treatment plant was completed in 2003, and the Public Works department will complete a $2.5 million rehabilitation project in 2015.

The department will focus next on eight pumps stations, which were built between 1950 and 1970.

"We're doing a fairly good job at managing our infrastructure addressing problems before they become big problems," Rhay said.
