“Rent Stabilization Ordinance”

[Dan Yukelson’s letter in issue #933] makes several important points that should be acknowledged. As an investor in rental housing and apartment leasing, he is understandably concerned about cash flow and long-term asset appreciation. Nobody wants to see rental properties starved of maintenance or be flipped by novice investors.

As a tenant I want to live in a well-maintained building. And because I value my neighbors, especially those whom I’ve known for more than a decade, I understand that good management is key. Who wants a revolving door on the property should the property owner under-maintain or otherwise squeeze his investment for short-term gains?

Yet despite three decades of rent stabilization that nominally capped rent increases at 10% annually, we still see we see such problems in our community. Take a look at my neighborhood near Charleville and Reeves: the southeast and southwest corners are degraded and dilapidated from a decade or more of under-investment. We all lose when that property owner shirks his responsibility.

Before I address Mr. Yukelson’s substantive arguments against rent control, please permit me to highlight several disingenuous assertions he has made.

First Mr. Yukelson appeals to the single family homeowner who understandably wants to safeguard her greatest investment: her home. Mr. Yukelson, however, chose to sell his home and invest in an apartment renting and leasing business. He owns a 4-unit rental property. Now he has a responsibility to four tenant households (three as he owner-occupies). He may call it a home but it’s a commercial property and he has a duty to his tenants, and to the city, to operate his investment like a business.

Second, Mr. Yukelson claims that the city’s rent stabilization policy will “severely diminish” the value of his investment. To illustrate, he disingenuously draws a straight line from the current 3% capped rent increase to some 3% ceiling on his appreciation. Not true; he provides no support for the claim because it is not supportable. Factors that will determine the appreciation of his business investment range from his operation’s efficiency to the broader real estate market and economy.

So, what about that 3% cap effect? Landlord after landlord has says they never raise rents up to the allowed 10%. (Zero to 3% is their claimed range of increase.) Yet despite a rent stabilization policy that has been in place for three decades with that 10% nominal cap we have seen rental property valuations greatly increase. Over the past decade, in fact, rental property prices on average have nearly doubled. Inflation? Not so much: just 18% in that time.

As an investor, Mr. Yukelson will likely realize such an increased valuation though he has only his 20% down payment on the line; and some proportion of his operations costs will be covered by his net operating income. The cost of money is cheap today and operations efficiencies pay great dividends.

Next, Mr. Yukelson suggests that the objective of rent stabilization (at least as introduced in January) is to provide affordable housing. That is not the purpose of the policy and it was not the substance of City Council urgency findings. The Council's concern was to support residential stability and ensure that those who are housed continue to be housed as the city discusses protections for those who rent.

Mr. Yukelson is correct, though, that rent stabilization is no substitute for an affordable housing policy. Yes, we need more housing at all levels of the market. But the most efficient way to provide affordable housing is to maintain the relatively affordable housing units that we already have. Unfortunately, however, our city recommends to developers that they buy, raze, and then consolidate multifamily parcells and build market-rate apartments and condominiums. That is no substitute for a sound affordable housing policy!

Mr. Yukelson's prescription is to simply scrap the rent stabilization program and the registry of rental units around which the program operates. Like landlords and their lobbyist, he cites the "intrusive nature of the rental registry" and points to other avenues like business tax records for the data that the city needs to hold landlords accountable. We've heard it all before and it's a smoke screen.

Here's how it works: the registry of rental units asks for no personal information on any tenant nor requires any confidential records of any rental property business. The registry form asks only whether any current tenancy includes any member of a class that the city wants to protect: that is, households with a minor, senior or a disabled resident. (Landlords said it is intrusive to require them to ask their tenants and the city seems to have agreed.)

As to Mr. Yukelson's suggestion the city look to its own business records for the data, well that is totally disingenuous. Landlords know better than anyone that there are many investors in the apartment renting and leasing business who hold no business tax license (one-in-ten perhaps) and some of those that are licensed have probably under-estimated their tax obligation. Why? Because the city never checked.

Adjudicated as a newspaper of general circulation for the County of Los Angeles. Case # BS065841 of the Los Angeles Superior Court, on November 30, 2000.

OUR DATA SPEAKS VOLUMES

So if they paid their business taxes at all it was on the honor system.

The one aspect of the registry form that most rankles landlords is the field that asks for actual rents. Due to tax avoidance the city can't deduce rents from tax license's gross receipts (the aggregate rent). However a registry of actual rents will help us deduce what their tax obligations were and whether they have paid. Let us see who's got no pants when the tide rolls out!

We've heard a lot of talk from landlords about program cost and added "bureaucracy." (Mr. Yukelson misstates the cost of the program as $2M.) The actual projected cost is $1.6 million per year. But the city already spends an estimated half-million bucks on the complaint-driven system that is not working for tenants. Under the program recommended by city consultants, that outlay would in effect subsidize the program to the tune of one-third of the entire cost. As for "paper-pushers"? Tenants know that code enforcement is not working now; adding a couple of more officers won't help. However a rent stabilization program with dedicated staff will help.

Even better this rent stabilization program is designed to be REVENUE NEUTRAL to the city. As in other cities the burden could be split 50-50 between landlords and tenants (as our tenants committee recommended to City Council). If we're willing to pay our part for a more effective city program, why not the landlords?

Lastly, the rental unit registry it already exists: City Council created it in January, reaffirmed it in ordinances in February and April, and then approved the registry form in June. That aspect of the rent stabilization program is not only implemented but is collecting property owner data right now.

But landlords think that if they can torpedo the registry they will sink the program entirely. Why? Stronger protections for tenants seems to represent a zero-sum game for landlords: effective rent stabilization must necessarily come at some cost to property owners. Maybe so: tenants who have suffered excessive (sometimes unlawful) rent increases while living in apartments that fall far short of conditions when rented may indeed demand more accountability from those who provide that housing.

The housing providers who sat across from us tenants at the dialogue table are the good guys; they upkeep their properties and they are licensed and pay business taxes. They are not degrading my corner of Charleville and Reeves. I'm sure Mr. Yukelson is a good guy too.

However Mr. Yukelson's plea, "It is my home. Leave me alone!" rings false to me because he is a rental property investor and business owner – not a single-family homeowner. He provides housing to his tenants and assumes obligations as his tenants' sole-source housing provider. He should be regulated as such. The myth of the 'free market' ends once his tenant signs a lease.

City Manager Receives Raise

The City Council approved a 2.7 percent raise for City Manager Mahdi Aluzri, with Councilmember John Mirisch dissenting.

The conditions of his employment provide that the City will review performance and compensation annually, and may grant compensation changes, including bonuses, or make mutually agreeable changes to the agreement, according to the staff report.

This year, the proposed Amendment to the Employment Agreement provides for a lump sum of 2.7 percent pay for performance bonus. The amount is equivalent to the annualized change in the cost of living as of April 1, and based on Aluzri's current salary, will result in an $8,164.80 payment.

When Councilmember John Mirisch asked City Attorney Larry Wiener for Aluzri's total compensation, Wiener said he did not possess the numbers for salary or compensation. He did corroborate Mirisch's estimate that, including benefits, Aluzri's total annual compensation is over $400,000.

"I think this is all relevant information. We're talking about increases which are minimal, but they need to be given [context] so the fact that it's nowhere in the agenda report, I think is a problem."

He then proceeded to criticize the second facet of Aluzri's agreement—removing the City's contractual cap of $4,000 for his general business expenses covering professional memberships, subscriptions, meetings, conferences, etc. He will instead report the expenses to the full City Council in lieu of the allocation.

During deliberation, Mirisch stood alone is his vote against the raise, saying that he believes Aluzri's current compensation is "at an extremely favorable level."

North Oakhurst Project Back on the Table

On August 10, the Planning Commission chose to table a proposed development of a two-story home at 331 North Oakhurst Drive on August 10.

The decision comes after the commission originally considered a request for six variances and a Development Plan Review at this site for a three-story, 3,724 square foot one-unit building on August 11, 2016. At that point architect applicant Hamid Gabbay received comments and was advised to return with a redesigned project.

On January 12, the Commission considered a three-story, 2,145 square foot one-unit building, which they again instructed the applicant to redesign. The project proposal on June 20 was for a 2,865 square foot one-unit building, and has implemented changes like decreasing the property from three stories to two stories, reducing the front setback from 25' to 20', and decreasing the height of the project from 32'-2" to 22'-2".

Then, on June 22, the Planning Commission directed staff to return to the commission with a resolution denying the requested entitlements as they still couldn't make the findings to allow the variances.

But at the last meeting, staff relayed a request from Gabbay that the Planning Commission not deny the project. He instead asked that they table the proposal so he could revise it and return to a future public hearing with a new plan.

Commissioner Craig Corman asked if Gabbay would remove several variance requests in his future revised proposal—first, to allow reduction of the required front yard setback; and second, to allow two parking spaces instead of the required three parking spaces. Gabbay said at that time he was not sure exactly what he'd bring back.

If the Planning Commission was to deny the project, City Planner Ryan Gohlich said, Gabbay would have to pay approximately $20,000 to submit an entirely new application in addition to public notice fees.

"I see no reason not to give them another chance. I don't see what the downside is for us. We're not granting any approvals; we're just willing to keep the options open," said Commissioner Andy Licht.

But Corman and Chair Lori Greene Gordon expressed interest in simply denying the project altogether.

"This project is too large. Every time it's come back, you've either done something that will be significantly impactful to the apartment house or significantly impactful to the home on the west," said Gordon. "I would request respectfully that you make it a smaller project so that it could be something that we could possibly find appropriate for the space."

The motion to table the project was approved 3-2, with Gordon and Corman dissenting.

A future public hearing date has not yet been set.

reliability per unit charge.

The revised plan includes a two-phase process: 1) Rate Adjustment to Address Five-Year Water & Wastewater Revenue Requirements; and 2) WEP Unit Capital Charge and Cost of Service Study.

The development of the test work plan is slated to cost $49,000. The bench scale/pilot testing will cost $100,000 to $150,000. The Hollywood & Maple Wells WTF pre-treatment will cost $8 million to $10 million. The complete well rehabilitation for four existing Hollywood wells will cost $2.36 million. The approximate subtotal is $12.2 million to $14.2 million.

"It is essential, if we are to stay in the water business, that we make the Foothill plant operable, [that] we solve these problems—they're not insurmountable. The money is essentially there in the Water Enterprise Fund to fund the necessary work," said Water Resources Manager Vince Damasse. "Without being able to process the water we have available to us, we will put ourselves in a precarious position."

Damasse proceeded to say that the City would face potential repercussions like having a plant that has no value and water drilling that has no value, "because we wouldn't know how to process it."

If approved on September 5, a three percent rate increase will begin on January 1, 2018, followed by 2 percent rate increases in 2019, 2020, 2021, and 2022. Expenses include forecasted payments to the City of Los Angeles Bureau of Sanitation for wastewater treatment and improvements to the Hyperion Treatment Facility, and costs for maintaining and rehabilitating the City's collection system.

COUNCIL APPROVES FIRST PHASE OF PREFERENTIAL PARKING PERMIT DISTRICTING

Test program will be conducted in the Southwest and the Civic Center areas

By Olivia Anderson

The City Council decided at their August 22 meeting to approve Phase 1 of the preferential parking permit districting process.

The decision comes after the City Council and Traffic & Parking Commission Liaison Committee met on May 4 and heard staff's recommendation to initiate Phase 1 by surveying the multiple-family zones on the 100 blocks south of Wilshire Boulevard between Spalding and South Rodeo Drives during the fall.

The testing will occur in three multiple-family areas: the 100 blocks south of Wilshire Boulevard between Spalding and

South Rodeo Drives (District 10); the multiple-family zones bordered by Civic Center Drive, Doheny Drive, Burton Way and North Maple Drive (District 5); and multiple-family zones bordered by North Almont Drive, Burton Way, North Clark Drive, and Wilshire Boulevard (District 7).

At the meeting, the councilmembers weighed the pros and cons of implementing

"We're going to have to be careful that we fashion this in a way people understand"

—Vice Mayor Julian Gold

the PPP districts. On one hand, they noted that consolidating the zones would increase the clarity of signage and reduce signage clutter. It would also allow multiple family residents to park in a wider area within a multiple-family district.

On the other hand, though, it could garner resistance by residents in existing permit zones; by businesses and organizations; and concern that a large district would result in increased parking on a particular street in multi-family zones.

Vice Mayor Julian Gold said that while he is in support of the project, Council must now convince people that "one size fits all" even though all 73 of the districts have their "own unique flavor." He said this will be a difficult aspect of the public outreach and that they must be careful as to how they go about it.

"I suspect that some part of the public is going to see this as taking something away," said Gold. "And although the overarching benefits are far greater and make a lot more sense and will make everybody's life a lot easier, I just think we're going to have to be careful that we fashion this in a way people understand."

During council questioning, Councilmember Robert Wunderlich asked staff why some people may be against the proposal, to which Transportation Planner Martha Eros said the areas that have been challenged are located near commercial areas. The challenge is that visitors opt to park on a residential block rather than a parking structure.

Source: August 22 Staff Report

Councilmember John Mirisch noted that it's important for the Council to listen closely to the residents pushing back, instead of coming across as "Big Brother" by telling them what is and isn't the best course of action.

"I certainly don't want a one-size-fits-all situation," said Mirisch.

Ultimately, the Council unanimously agreed to support testing of the proposed three districts.

"But not with the understanding that we're moving over into a 20 zone system," said Mirisch. "I think we need to throw some ideas out there and see what the residents think, rather than try and convince them of anything. That's not our job."

9000 WILSHIRE PROJECT APPROVED

But not all neighbors are in support

By Olivia Anderson

Following the Planning Commission's approval of a Development Plan Review for 9000 Wilshire, several neighbors have expressed continued concerns about the project.

The resistance comes after applicant Sean Youssefi submitted a request on January 26 to demolish two existing buildings, one of which is currently a rug gallery, at the location and construct a 3-story, 31,702 square-foot office building. It will also include a 2,049 SF rooftop lunch room.

At the commission meeting on August 10, Almont Drive resident Phil Margo said he "strenuously object[s]" to the approval of the project on 9000 Wilshire because the approval was based on "a tangled web of mumbo jumbo figures." Margo cited that the decision is based on a traffic study from two years ago and doesn't reflect the neighborhood's current traffic flow.

Margo said that even though the commissioners stated last week that the EIR found there won't be a significant increase in traffic flow, they neglected to take into account the resident's guidelines. He proceeded to state that the estimated number is a 6 percent traffic increase, "which means that there could be 100 more cars per day, which is 100 over too many already."

Margo also went on to state that 6 percent is a significant number and that the procecedure was unjust, favoring business growth rather than protection of the residents.

"The increase may or may not be legal, but it's unfortunate, uncomfortable, and dangerous for the residents," said Margo.

Fellow Almont Drive resident Rubin Sadka, on the other hand, explained that he is pro-growth. His concerns arose from the fact that the project is currently slated to have an entrance on Almont Drive, a street he says has many children and could become dangerous for them.

Sadka instead suggested the entrance be moved to Wilshire Drive, and a barrier be implemented by the alley of Almont so as to mitigate traffic and protect the children.

"Development has to be in such a way that satisfies everybody; not in a way where one percent gets more than the others," said

Sadka.

Project attorney Murray Fischer assured that all the conditions in the development plan review and construction management, traffic issues have been specifically addressed, and that he has been in constant contact with the applicant who plans to keep the public informed.

"All of the items that were brought before everybody here have been thoroughly vetted over a two year period," said Fischer. "I believe that this project is a good project."

On August 10, the Planning Commission formally approved the resolution drafted after the July 27 meeting for the Development Plan Review and Final opening kickoff is set for 7 p.m.

The game is being played at Culver City High because installation of the new artificial turf field at Beverly High's Nickoll Field has not been completed, Beverly Hills athletic director Kevin Brown said.

Culver City has waived the rental fee, Brown said. Brown said he did not know what Culver City High charges for rental of its field.

Both teams were supposed to open the season with different opponents. The Normans were supposed to face Windward, which had planned to play both eight- and 11-man games this season, but did not have enough players to field an 11-man team, athletic director Tyrone Powell said.

Carnegie Schools Riverside was scheduled to face Oceanside-based Victory Christian Saturday.

"They emailed us last Saturday and said they didn't have enough players," Carnegie athletic director Bryan Kennedy said.

"We scrambled around last week. Our coach [Jason McMains] got a hold of the [Beverly Hills] coach [Steve Geanakos] and here we are."

Kennedy described Carnegie Schools Riverside as a "Christian-based college prep school" with an enrollment of about 200. It opened in 2013.

The Wolverines were 7-4 in 2016, winning the Arrowhead League championship and losing in the first-round of the Southern Section Division 13 playoffs, the lowest division.

Carnegie Schools Riverside has 40-50 players on what Kennedy called "a fairly young team" with "not too many seniors."

The team plans to leave Riverside at 1:30 p.m. stopping en route to Culver City for a pregame meal, Kennedy said. It plans to arrive about 5 p.m.

The Normans were 0-10 in 2016. Beverly Hills has lost six consecutive season openers and nine of its last 10, including a 54-0 loss to Oak Park last season.

Notice to Potential Bidders If you are considering bidding on this property lien, you should understand that there are risks involved in bidding at a Trustee auction. You will be bidding on a lien, not on the property itself. Placing the highest bid at a Trustee auction does not automatically entitle you to free and clear ownership of the property. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same Lender may hold more than one mortgage or Deed of Trust on the property. Notice to Property Owner The sale date shown on this Notice of Sale may be postponed one or more times by the Mortgagee, Beneficiary, Trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code. The law requires that information about Trustee Sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale.
